MOVE IS CALLED A MASTER STROKE

Witnesses in Caillaux Case Describe Shooting of Figaro Editor.

Paris, July 21.—Mme. Henriette Caillaux was up at 7 this morning preparing for the second day's hearing of the charge against her of the wilful murder on March 16 of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro. The wife of the former premier and minister of finance took an early breakfast and before 8 o'clock was waiting for her husband who, however, did not call at the prison of the Conciergerie till between 9 and 10 o'clock. The prisoner and her husband conversed for half an hour and afterward she lunched.

"I feel better than I did yesterday," Mme. Caillaux said to-day to the solicitous prison warden when he asked today about her health. The prisoner had previously looked through a mass of morning papers and had found that generally she had been sympathetically treated. The stenographic report of her testimony filled sixteen columns in some of the newspapers and besides this there were many appreciations of her dexterous arrangement of facts and of the feeling she had put into her descriptions of her agony.

Makes Herself at Home.

The court was a little late in assembling to-day and meanwhile Mme. Caillaux talked over her case with Fernand Labori, her advocate, in a private waiting room. After Judge Louis Albanet and his associates had taken their places on the bench Mme. Caillaux entered the prisoner's enclosure without hesitation and with an air of making herself at home. She was dressed precisely as in the first day of the trial. She took off her coat and looked quietly around the crowded court. Dark circles under her eyes and her quick gestures seemed to betray the strain she was undergoing. Joseph Caillaux, the prisoner's husband, then entered the court and took his place among the witnesses. He was accompanied by two detectives, owing to the fact that a group of bystanders had hooted him and shouted insults at him as he left the prison after visiting his wife.

Two office boys were the first witnesses to-day. They described the arrival

LEADERS SHAKE HANDS WITH KING

Redmond and Dillon Greet Monarch First Time at Conference.

London, July 21.—So deep is the interest taken by all classes in the crisis which has arisen out of the Irish home rule question that great crowds gathered today outside Buckingham palace to witness the arrival of the various party leaders who are to participate in the conference inaugurated by King George with a view to bringing about a peaceful settlement.

The Right Hon. James Lowther speaker of the house of commons who was chosen to preside over the conference, was the first to put in an appearance. He was quickly followed by the eight men who represent the various parties—liberal, unionist, nationalist and Ulsterite. All came in motor cars with the exception of the Marquis of Lansdowne, who walked.

King George, with Baron Stamfordham, his private secretary, received the statesmen in the chamber where the privy council always meets and he shook hands cordially with all of them. Probably this was the first time that John E. Redmond and John Dillon, the Irish nationalist leaders, had ever exchanged greetings with their sovereign as it had been the practice for nationalist members of parliament to remain away from all functions where members of the house of common were likely to be brought into contact with royalty.

The meeting of the conservatives and liberal leaders on such intimate footing was apparently friendly but could not have been cordial, as Premier Asquith and Andrew Bonar Law have been barely on speaking terms as Mr. Law practically accused the premier in the house of commons of lying about recent government plans to suppress the Ulster volunteers. The Marquis of Lansdowne, leader of the unionists in the house of lords, and David Lloyd George, chancellor of the exchequer, two of the other conferees represent the most extreme aristocratic and democratic schools of British politics and are generally believed to be bitter personal enemies. At the same time the members of the Irish nationalist and Ulster unionist factions could not have felt much pleasure in finding themselves in such close association. Since personal feeling among politicians in the United Kingdom never ran so high as at present the atmosphere of the gathering could not have been otherwise than extremely chilly and formal. After a brief conversation King George withdrew from the meeting about noon leaving the conferees to their deliberations.

The conference at Buckingham palace, after being in session for only about an hour and a half, adjourned for the day but will meet again tomorrow.

King Addresses Conferees.

King George in receiving the conferees at Buckingham palace made the following brief speech:

"It is with feelings of satisfaction and hopefulness that I receive you here today and I thank you for the manner in which you have responded to my summons. It is also a matter for congratulation that the speaker of the house of commons has consented to preside over your meetings.

PATMONT DROPS OUT ONCE MORE

Temperance Worker Eludes Friends on Train to Chicago.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 21.—Rev. Louis R. Patmont, temperance worker, has again disappeared, having left the train on the Soo line bound for Chicago some time after 2 o'clock this morning, according to a telegram received from Rev. Claud F. Witty, dated Lakeville, Ill., by Rev. C. L. Milton of Milwaukee.

Rev. Mr. Patmont, who disappeared from Detroit more than a month ago and was found at Rib Lake, Wis., Saturday, passed through Rugby Junction early today en route to Detroit. He was accompanied by Rev. Claud F. Witty and A. Y. Malcolmson of Detroit. It was planned to place Patmont in a sanitarium at Detroit until he had recuperated. Rev. C. L. Milton of Milwaukee, who identified Patmont on Sunday, reached home to-day.

"Patmont is a very nervous man and part of the time seems to be demented," said Mr. Milton. "Patmont told me that the real cause for his disappearance from Detroit was that he was held up by two men who threatened to kill him if he did not leave the city. The man also

When Young Shah of Persia Takes Constitutional Oath of Office.

Teheran, Persia, July 21.—Sultan Ahmed Mirzathe, shah of Persia, today, on attaining his official majority, took the constitutional oath of office in the palace of the national council. The ceremony was very brief and took place in the presence of the members of the national council, the royal princes, high state officials, foreign diplomatic representatives and their wives.

The little shah, accompanied by the regent, Abul Kassim Khan Nassenel Mulk, drove to the palace of the national council in a glass coach drawn by eight white horses. The procession passed through the gaily decorated streets of the Persian capital, which were carefully guarded. Large bodies of police and troops were stationed in strategic points and the entire route was lined by police and native gendarmrie, as well as the famous Cossack brigade, while mounted men surrounded the shah's carriage and also those of the cabinet ministers and other officials who followed him. On entering the palace of the national council the shah bowed to the assemblage and then pronounced the constitutional oath. Immediately after the ceremony he proceeded to the mosque for prayer.

Washington, July 21.—Provisional President Carbajal does not intend to surrender unconditionally to Gen. This was the tenor of information from authoratative sources today in Mexico City to Washington diplomats. It spread a feeling of pessimism in some quarters over the possibility of an amicable settlement of the revolution. Emilie Rabasa, head of the delegation which represented Gen. California Rail Commission Would Know What Calhoun Did With It.

San Francisco, July 21.—When the California railroad commission resumes July 28 the inquiry, begun yesterday, into the financial condition of the United Railroads company, of San Francisco, another effort will be made to discover what became of the $1,696,000 diverted by Patrick Calhoun, former president, from the funds of the corporation.

Jesse W. Lilienthal, present head of the company, told the commission yesterday that to the best of his knowledge only $300,000 of the amount, all of which Calhoun has stated was invested in the Solano irrigated farms project, was used for that purpose.

The proceedings revealed that the company's books showed a deficit of $4,880,471 at the time of its last annual report. Of this amount, $3,906,909 could not be accounted for. If, when the commission's hearing is resumed a deficit is still shown, the commission stated

QUARREL ABOARD YACHT.

American Legation Secretary Resents Harbor Master's Orders.

Christiana, July 21.—A serious quarrel occurred here yesterday on board the American steam yacht Pauline, between Franklin M. Gunther, secretary of the American legation, and the harbor master. The trouble arose over a request ofthe harbor master for the Pauline to change her anchorage, as she was occupying the space reserved for the German emperor's yacht, Meteor, and other foreign racing craft.

Mr. Gunther protested angrily against the harbor master's orders and, it is said ended the quarrel by knocking the officials cap off his head. During the trouble a woman guest on board the Pauline endeavored to soothe the disputants. The affair has created much discussion here.

Man Involved in Mulhall Charges Says He Will Appeal to People.

Washington, July 21.—Representative James T. McDermott of Illinois, to-day on the floor of the house offered his resignation to take effect immediately. McDermott is under charges in connection with the lobby investigation.

recommended that he be expelled from the house.

Came as Sensation.

His resignation came as a sensation to-day when immediately after the house had assembled he rose to a question of personal privilege and offered it from the floor, declaring he would "appeal his case to the people of the Fourth district of Illinois." He said he had already forwarded his resignation to Governor Dunne and had announced himself as a candidate for re-election. He presented a letter to the speaker announcing his resignation.

"Unfortunately," he said, "I came to this house a poor man; fortunately for myself, however, taking into consideration the character of the charges against me, I leave this house a poor man. I have been compelled during my service as a member of this house to borrow money from my friends. It so happened that afterward they became opponents of legislation which passed this house, affecting their business as pawnbrokers and as liquor dealers.

WHO PUT POISON IN SUGAR BOWL?

Illinois to Probe Case of Mrs. Adams, Victim of Bichloride.

Decatur, Ill., July 21.—How did bichloride of mercury get into the sugar bowl at the home of J. F. Adams, 1012 East Eldorado street?

Its discovery through an analysis by the state board of health in a Chicago laboratory revealed the cause of the serious illness of Mrs. Adams, but throws no light on the facts concerning its presence there. Whether some one put the poison into the sugar bowl or whether it was already in the sugar when the package of sugar was brought to the house remains unanswered.

The state board found such a large percentage of the poison in the sample sent them that an inspector will reach Decatur tomorrow to conduct an investigation.

Mrs. Adams was taken ill Monday, July 13. Mr. Adams thereupon recalled an unusual taste in the sugar and took a sample to W. P. Shade, city commissioner of public health and safety, who at once forwarded it to the state authorities.

Investigation at the store where the sugar was purchased indicated that the entire barrel had not been poisoned, as there had been no other complaints.

Bichloride of mercury, commonly known as corrosive sublimate, is sometimes used to exterminate insect pests, and is in the form of a white powder which hardly would be noticeable to the eye when combined with sugar. Mr. Adams protests there was none of the poison in use in his house.

Mrs. Adams, though for a time seriously ill, seems to be recovering. No other member of the Adams family suffered.

CARBAJAL MAY PUT UP FIGHT

Favor Aggressive Attitude.

While denying themselves to callers, it became known that they favored a more aggressive attitude by Provisional President Carbajal to secure guarantees of protection for people in Mexico City and federal territory generally. They made it plain that Mr. Carbajal had no objection to turning over the government to Gen. Carranza, but must insist on some assurances in advance that property would not be despoiled and that there would be no wholesale executions or arrests.

Mr. Castellot said he was confident that ultimately there would be an agreement in that connection between Carbajal and Carranza.

In some quarters there was a disposition today to regard the situation as unfavorable. It was learned that the three commissioners announced as having been sent by Provisional President Carbajal to interview Carranza in reality were unofficial and voluntary peace envoys.

Not Regarded as Unusual.

Mr. Castellot, however, did not regard that as unusual, pointing out that inasmuch as Carranza had refused to treat with a commission officially appointed by Carbajal, it was necessary to seek unofficial methods of communication. Another aspect of the situation which was commented upon was the knowledge that Gen. Carranza, while informing the American consuls at Monterey that he would receive a commission from Carbajal, made it plain that he could do so only to arrange for the unconditional surrender by the Mexico City authorities.

These uncompromising terms have puzzled diplomats who were hoping for a quick solution. They believe the decisive influence for peace of a continuation of civil strife rests with the United States. There was no indication today how far the American government was prepared to exert pressure on Carranza to obtain an amnesty and guarantee. Diplomats were watching with keen interest the reports stating that Gen. Villa was again threatening a break with Carranza.

COURT HEARS FICTION READ

at the offices of the Figaro on the day of the crime of Mme. Caillaux. They told how she waited and gave details of her entrance into the room occupied by Gaston Calmette and of hearing shots. One of the boys, Adrian Nicet, crouched down on the witness stand and uttered a series of low cries to show how he had found M. Calmette sheltering himself behind his desk.

Paul Bourget, the "immortal" who was with Calmette in his office at the moment when Mme Caillaux's card was brought in then told the jury of the incident.

"'You will not see her?' I said.

Master Stroke by Labori.

Maitre Labori then thrilled the overcrowded court room by reading a dialogue from Bourget's novel "The Demon of The Midi," in which the characters discuss and condemn the publication of the heroine's love letters. Coming immediately after M. Bourget's eulogy of Gaston Calmette with which he had closed his testimony, the reading of the dialogue by Maitre Labori was regarded by observing lawyers as a master stroke.

Maitre Labori's voice was musical and full of dramatic feeling. When he had concluded Paul Bourget remarked: "Literature is not life." He agreed, however, that private letters ought not to be published and said he did not believe Calmette had intended to put the Caillaux letters into print.

The scene of the shooting was then described by employes of the Figaro. Charles Giraudeau, a reporter; Henri Rouleau, a messenger, and Jean Cercle, a telephone operator, related portions of their experiences. They said Louis Voisin, of the advertising department was talking with Henri Honore, an artist, and Edouard Masson, in the room where Mme. Caillaux was waiting to see M. Calmette.

Mme. Caillaux Interrupts.

"We never mentioned Caillaux," said Voisin, "as she said yesterday."

Mme Caillaux interposed, saying: "I wish to ask M. Voisin whether one of his friends did not say: "is the sheet ready?" and whether M. Voisin did not answer, "we have a great paper on Caillaux tomorrow."

"That is absolutely false," said Voisin.

Mme. Caillaux: "I heard Voisin say to his friends: 'It costs dear but we are letting loose the hunting dogs on all sides.'"

Honore was then called and denied that Caillaux had been mentioned and Masson's deposition was read to the same effect.

His Description Vivid.

Other members of the staff of the Figaro then testified, among them Louis Latzarus, who gave a vivid description of the scene when Mme. Caillaux shot M. Calmette.

Latzarus said he heard shots and ran to Calmette's room where Calmette had sunk in a state of collapse in a chair. M. Sirac, he said, was holding a woman by the wrists. She cried: "Let me go. I am not going to escape."

Sirac then let her go, said the witness and she stood near the door, clear eyed and with her face neither pale nor flushed. She seemed untroubled by the fifteen editors who quickly gathered around her.

"She began to speak," said the witness, "saying, 'since there is no justice in France——'

"'Shut your mouth,' said one of the editors. 'After what you have done, keep quiet.'

"'I wasn't speaking to you,' said Mme Caillaux."

Mistress of Herself.

Latzarus declared that Mme. Caillaux was perfectly mistress of herself when he saw her after the crime. He admitted that he had talked about the Caillaux campaign many times with Calmette, adding: "My chief said he had diplomatic documents important enough absolutely to crush Caillaux."

After Calmette had printed the "Thy Joe" letter, according to Latzarus, he remarked: "My pockets are empty. I have nothing more."

Judge Albanet then asked Mme Caillaux if she had anything to say about the Victor Fabre document and Mme Caillaux replied: "I had no fear of that because I knew the part my husband had taken in the Rochett affair."

Then alluding to her calmness after the shooting Mme. Caillaux said: "All the world knew that night the condition of M. Calmette except myself and I didn't know until the next day that my action was irreparable."

Maitre Labori remarked to the court that two of the documents found upon the person of Gaston Calmette had been sent to President Poincare and that all the others had been sent to Gorges Prestat, the president of the board of directors of the Figaro. "I see Mr. Prestat among the spectators," continued Labori, "perhaps he can tell the court what was done with those papers."

"The papers I received," said M. Prestat on arising, "were only copies in the handwriting of M. Calmette. One was the Fabre document, then already published; the second was the "Thy Joe" letters from which the intimate passages had been expurgated. I considered I had the right to destroy these papers and I burned them." Then looking toward the jury he said. "They had cost the life of my relative."

At half past four o'clock the court took a recess.

Mme. Caillaux took frequent notes of the testimony during the day, writing on a pad placed upon her knees and she accumulated quite a large portfolio.

Most Important Testimony.

The most important testimony at the second days' hearing was that of President M. Poincare, of the republic, whose deposition was taken by Judge Emil Forichon, the first president of the court of appeals. This narrates how Joseph Caillaux, then a minister of state, had called upon President Poincare on the day Calmette was killed, and had spoken about the probable publication in the Figaro of letters between himself and Mme. Caillaux. In the course of an excited talk M. Calliaux exclaimed, according to the deposition: "If Calmette publishes the letters I will kill him."

Joseph Caillaux also took the stand. He looked very young to have been premier of France and chief of the important radical party. After relating incidents of his private life after his marriage with Mme. Gueydan, he explained the circumstances of the writing of the two letters to Mme. Raynouard, who afterwards became Mme. Caillaux. His voice trembled and he was obviously ill at east, but he gathered composure as he proceeded.

"I have been invited to many places in Chicago which perhaps some members may think above my social station, but I have preferred to associate with the people who sent me to congress and when I am at home in Chicago I am to be found at my accustomed haunts and among my old companions, associating with the men and boys in the great union stock yards.

The Mulhall Charge.

Mulhall charged that McDermott had permitted him to use his congressional frank for circulating matter for the manufacturers and that McDermott had claimed he had received $7,500 from local pawnbrokers to work against the federal loan shark law, and a $2,000 campaign contribution from a Chicago brewers' association. McDermott's defense was that money received from the pawnbrokers was in the nature of personal loans, and that the brewers had contributed only $500 out of personal friendship. He also denied a charge by Mulhall that he had forged Harold F. McCormick's name to a check for $250.

The case was to come before the house for a vote Thursday.

CHICAGO MAN MAKES REPLY

W. Va., to bridge over the difficulties between Mr. Warburg and the banking committee, before which he has refused to appear. No word had been received from either Mr. Warburg or Senator O'Gorman.

Warburg May Appear.

Senators of the banking committee denied they had any part in the effort to induce Mr. Warburg to appear but thought it probable he would do so in which case they believed there would be little opposition to his confirmation.

Senator Vardaman, one of the democrats opposing Mr. Jones, issued a statement declaring he would not vote for him.

"I have the same objection to him and men of the same kind being put in control and management of our currency system that the Presbyterian would have in the pagan teaching theology in a Christian church or an imperialist administering laws designed to establish a democracy. I am sorry the president appointed him," he said.

Trust Program Now Complete.

The administration's anti-trust program was nearing completion today in senate committees. Revision of the Clayton bill had been agreed upon in the judiciary committee and the railway securities bill was receiving its finishing touches in the inter-state commerce committee. Important changes were made by the judiciary committee in the Clayton bill as it passed the house. One of the most important was one providing for a court review of orders issued by the inter-state commerce commission or the proposed federal trade commission against corporations found to have violated the trust laws. The leaders were determined today to press more vigorously for prompt action when the full trust program comes before the senate. To that end they may insist upon longer sessions with the possibility of night sessions.

Discuss New Haven Move.

Practically all the time at the cabinet meeting to-day was devoted to discussion of the government's impending anti-trust suit to dissolve the New Haven railroad merger. Attorney General McReynolds presented a complete statement of the efforts of the department of justice to bring the railroad system within the law without a court fight. Some sort of an official statement was expected later in the day.

WELCOMED WITH A ROLLING PIN

Howard Sargent Wants His Marriage Dissolved and Alleges Reasons.

Howard C. Sargent, of 2809 John street, has gone to the circuit court with a divorce complaint against Mary A. Sargent and he alleges reasons in abundance why he should be set free from the woman he took to wife in September, 1911, and from whom he separated Monday, July 20. He says that on Sunday night when he returned home his spouse met him with a rolling pin and with that traditional weapon of the housewife bade him welcome and that on Monday she bit him, beat him with a chair and grabbed a table knife with which she threatened to take his life. He says she treated him with cruelty from the beginning of their married life and within three months had told him she "would give him a life of hell," and made good, "raising so much hell around," according to the language of the complaint, "that they were thrown out of their home by the landlord." He ascribes to her a terrible temper, charges that she called him names too vile, obscene and indecent to put in the complaint, went once for four days without cooking meals for himself and little son, often refused to cook for them, chased his relatives out of the house when they called, broke up furniture faster than he could afford to buy it, bombarded him with dishes once when he had his boy on his arm, made him a target for plates and threw the chairs down the steps, breaking them. He asks the custody of a 2-year-old son. There is another child of 8 months.

Notes of the Courts.

The the last will and testament of the late Philip Fissell, just filed for probate, leaves all his property, real and personal to his wife, Anna M. Fissell without condition and names her executrix. The document is one of the shortest of the kind filed in a long time. A hundred words sufficed the testator to dispose of his estate.

Save for two divorce suits scheduled for hearing before Judge W. C. Ryan in the superior court Tuesday afternoon there was nothing doing in that tribunal all day.

Charles B. Fitch has begun suit in the superior court against the Maumee Brick & Tile company to collect $100 on account.

Briefs have been filed by attorneys representing John W. Bruns in an application for a rehearing of the suit of Bruns against Daniel C. Cope to break the will of Cope's late wife, who left a large estate. The supreme court recently handed down a ruling for Cope, who won in the circuit court of Allen county.

Complains of his Partner.

In a suit filed in the superior court by Edward Fairfield against Jesse Peck, the plaintiff asks for the dissolution of the partnership existing between himself and the defendant, doing business as the Fairfield Trucking company, prays the appointment of a receiver for the business, the sale of its property and the winding up of the business. The complaint says the defendant assumes full control of the business, and does no work to promote the concern's prosperity, but on the contrary is causing it to lose ground.

TWO BARNS BURN ON SOUTH SIDE

Boys and Matches the Cause of Bad Blaze and Big Loss.

Fire starting in the haymow of the barn at 1828 South Calhoun street, owned by Samuel Bonahoon, communicated itself to the adjoining barn owned by Joseph Schnee and before the fire department was able to estinguish the flames, both structures were badly damaged and it is estimated that the loss will total nearly $300. It is believed that boys playing with matches in the Bonahoon barn caused the fire.

For a time several other frame structures in the neighborhood were threatened by the flames and sparks and the danger was made more serious owing to the continued dry weather. When the fire department apparatus reached the blaze both barns were burning fiercely and for a time threatened the entire neighborhood, because of a strong wind that fanned the flames.

WOULD OUST OIL COMPANIES.

Suit Filed to Drive Several Concerns Out of Oklahoma.

Atoko, Okla., July 21.—Proceedings asking that the Texas company, an oil pipe line and purchasing corporation and the Producers Oil company and Central Petroleum company, producers of crude petroleum, be ousted from Oklahoma were instituted in district court here yesterday. The petition charges the Texas company as the parent corporation, and the producing companies as subsidiaries, violate the state anti-trust laws in their alleged combination.

Amos L. Beattie, of New York, general counsel for the Texas companies, replying to the petition contested the jurisdiction of the district court. Ten days were allowed for filing briefs.

The state's petition asks that the license to do business in Oklahoma of the accused companies be cancelled, their property in the state forfeited and fines aggregating $4,000,000 be imposed.

The Indian office asked that he be formally adopted by the Blackfeet in order that he might share in the rights and privileges of the members of the tribe. The tribal council, at a meeting at Browning, Mont., took action and he now will receive his 320 acres of land.

UNION MINERS AS GUARDS.

Sheriff at Bellaire, O., Recruits Force of 150 for Strike Duty.

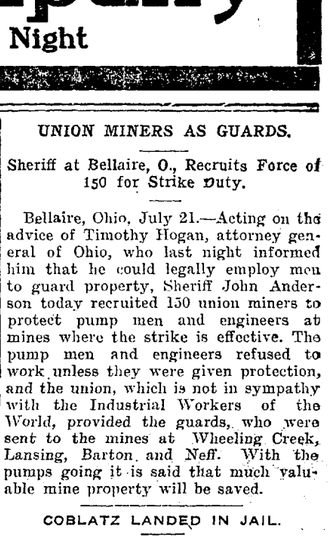

Bellaire, Ohio, July 21.—Acting on the advice of Timothy Hogan, attorney general of Ohio, who last night informed him that he could legally employ men to guard property, Sheriff John Anderson today recruited 150 union miners to protect pump men and engineers at mines where the strike is effective. The pump men and engineers refused to work unless they were given protection, and the union, which is not in sympathy with the Industrial Workers of the World, provided the guards, who were sent to the mines at Wheeling Creek, Lansing, Barton and Neff. With the pumps going it is said that much valuable mine property will be saved.

Death Threats Pass in Divorce Action

Mrs. Adele D. Shorb, wife of Donald McM. Shorb, is the woman involved in the famous "death threat divorce case," which recently came to trial in San Francisco.

Presiding Judge John J. Van Nostrand, Donald Shorb, the defendant, and his attorney, Charles A. Lee, all received anonymous letters signed by a skull and crossbones threatening them with death if Shorb contests his wife's suit.

The missives were scrawled and misspelled, but have the appearance of having been written by a person of education and disguised to emulate ignorance.

Lee and Shorb have received several of the letters. Only one of them, written to Shorb, is dated. Attorney Lee turned his missives over to the postal inspectors.

BILIOUSNESS

There is Nothing Like Common Sense and USOLINE to Cure Biliousness.

You can dose yourself for this symptom, and for that symptom.

But what's the use so long as you leave the CAUSE untouched?

This is where common sense comes in—to think out what makes you bilious, what gives you sour stomach, gas, belching, sick headache, heartburn, pains in back, liver and kidneys, indigestion, yellow skin, pimples, nervousness and depressed feeling.

It's Constipation.

The bowels are clogged up, irregular, not doing their work properly.

You take a "dose of pills," a bigger dose than last time, because that's a peculiarity of astringent drugs, that it takes larger and still larger doses to have effect. These violent purgatives relieve the bowels, but it's a painful operation and simply aggravates the condition and does not cure the constipation.

Now try USOLINE—it isn't a cathartic, a purgative, a laxative, or drug of any kind—simply a pure mineral oil pumped from the earth, in Russia, and re-refined by the OIL PRODUCTS COMPANY, New York.

It's tasteless, odorless, colorless. The system does not absorb USOLINE because it is a mineral oil, and that's why a mineral oil is preferable for the purpose—we want it in the bowels, and USOLINE simply passes down the throat and stomach into the bowels and lubricates the whole passage, causing the movements to be regular, easy, painless and natural.

Then your constipation disappears, and with it biliousness and the rest of your troubles.

Try USOLINE—There is nothing like it. Give it to your children for upset stomachs and constipation. They like to take it. Sold by druggists generally, 25c. and 50c. a large bottle, and $1 a three pint tin. Also in capsules, 2 doz. in a box, 50c. Ask or write for free printed matter.

Special Prize For Which All Registered Babies Compete.

Visitors to the pavilion have seen and admired the handsome combination cart and horse that has been on exhibition during the season. It was thought best at first to give the prancing horse with its attached carriage to the handsomest child between two and three years old that might attend the Baby Show, because a baby of that age would coo and clap its little hands with glee when holding the lines which supposedly guide and direct the horse, because at the slightest pull the horse prances in great fashion. Inasmuch as the Baby Show has always been limited to babies two years old and under, the horse and carriage will be awarded within the age limit. Mothers have expressed much admiration for the horse and carriage and have frequently declared that should it be given to their babies they would preserve it until their kiddies could enjoy it to the full. Therefore, every baby under two years of age that is registered on the day of the baby show, or before that time by mail, will be given a chance to possess the handsome special prize. It is really a valuable and unique gift, as it cost Mr. Williams $20.00 to purchase it in New York city. Should you register your baby by mail it will be necessary for you to stop at the registration table in the pavilion on the day of the Baby Show in order to secure your registration number.

MAN-ANIMAL KNOWLES, NAKED AND UNARMED, TO LIVE LIKE CAVE-MAN IN SIERRA WILDS.

Joseph Knowles, the "Modern Adam," entering the forest to live man-animal existence, and below as he appears in the bear pelt he secured by clubbing beast to death in pitfall.

San Francisco, Cal., July 20.—To convince skeptics that a man can go into the wilderness naked and unarmed, without food or implement and wrest from it sustenance and shelter like the beasts, Joseph Knowles who proclaims himself an efficient man-animal will repeat in the California Sierras his widely heralded Maine woods experiment.

Minus clothes, firearms, knife, matches and supplies, this Boston author-artist-trapper who has been dubbed the "Modern Adam," plans to remain in the timbered slopes of the north-California mountains for 60 days, beginning about the middle of July.

He will try to avoid even the sight of another human being, and for that reason has chosen a practicall inacessible region.

Knowles proposes to build his fires, erect his shelter, provide bodily covering skins, and slay his meat after the manner of the cave-man of half a million years ago.

And at the end of the 60-day period he predicts, he will emerge physically stronger than when he enters the woods, although bearded and forbidding in appearance.

I trailed him to his temporary and sumptuous lair in a hotel suite here on the eve of his departure for the second wilderness ordeal.

Knowles is a big man, thick of neck, barrel-chested, with a steady grey eye, grey hair and a rumbling voice.

"I'm restless," he said, plucking at his clothes. "I feel like a bear when it comes shedding time. I'm anxious to get off these confounded duds and hit the timber trails—where a man is free."

The skeptics have been saying that Joe's man-animal professions and his proclaimed disgust with the messy routine of civilization are all a pose. It is for their benefit, he says, that he will make the California experiment in antideluvian existence.

"These fellows who assert that a man can't go into the timber and win the battle for life with wit and bare fist alone, like a bear, deer, mountain lion and bob cat, would have us admit that he is inferior to the least of the animals over which he boasts superiority," challenges Knowles. "These timid steam-heat and steam-beer creatures make me tired!

"There's nothing remarkable about my stunt. If there were it would be practically valueless. For I contend that any man with the knowledge of woodcraft and a healthy body can live anywhere you put him—can do what I did in the Maine woods and what I will repeat here.

"Your cave-man progenitor did it. Are you going to admit you're his inferior?"

"The widespread doubt in this connection is a sad commentary on the lengths to which we have drifted away from Nature, the great teacher, healer and character builder."

"I am simply one modern who has not entirely forgotten the cunning and resourcefulness of primeval progenitors—an efficient savage, if you please, underneath the 'scratched skin.'"

Knowles' iron physique and the equipment of woods-lore he acquired as a boy and later as professional guide, fit him especially for his unique undertaking. In his 44th year, he is pronounced by Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, physical director of Harvard, as the equal in strength and development of the famous Sandow, with additional staying powers.

"Look at me," said Knowles in conclusion, stretching his great arms. I'd be a pretty specimen of manhood if I'd admit an inability to emulate the forest creatures in getting a living. What a travesty it is on man's upward climb when, lost in the wilds, he lies down to die merely because his wits are too dull to show him the way to live!"

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

13 And after certain days king Agrippa and Bernice came unto Caesarea to salute Festus.
14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix:
15 About whom, when I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.
16 To whom I answered, It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, and have license to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.
17 Therefore, when they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.
18 Against whom when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:
19 But had certain questions against him of their own superstition, and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.
20 And because I doubted of such manner of questions, I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.
21 But when Paul had appealed to be reserved unto the hearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept till I might send him to Caesar.
22 Then Agrippa said unto Festus, I would also hear the man myself. To-morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.
23 And on the morrow, when Agrippa was come, and Bernice, with great pomp, and was entered into the place of hearing, with the chief captains, and principal men of the city, at Festus' commandment Paul was brought forth.
24 And Festus said, King Agrippa, and all men which are here present with us, ye see this man, about whom all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and also here, crying that he ought not to live any longer.
25 But when I found that he had committed nothing worthy of death, and that he himself hath appealed to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

Relieving Traffic Congestions

In launching an effort to secure relief from the congested state of Calhoun street traffic, directors of the Commercial club have engaged in a work of much importance which we hope will bring early results in the form of pronounced relief. It is directed against a condition that is apparent not merely during what are known as the "rush hours" of the day, but amounts to a practically continuous situation. And a very large proportion of the congestion is wholly unnecessary.

Calhoun street, as everyone realizes, is too narrow at best, a condition that resulted because of the fact that those who originally provided the street did not foresee the day when a highway ample for those times would be much too narrow for traffic demands which later years would bring. Chief causes for the present complaint however, must be laid at the doors of the drivers of the big trucks and vans which might just as well traverse Clinton or Harrison streets between the railroads. Until they are forced to do so, however, they will not do it. They insist on getting into the main artery where there is most life and action, and where they may indulge their propensity for sight-seeing rather than take a less-traversed route that would enable them to move more rapidly and with infinitely less difficulty and danger to pedestrians and to other vehicles.

Harrison street is not at all bad as a driveway for heavy traffic. Clinton street is not so good in its present staate, and it is possible that improvement of the street would help a bit. It may as well be understood, however. that nothing will induce the truck drivers to quit Calhoun street until they are forced to do so. Occasionally it may be necessary for trucks to use Calhoun street, but 90 per cent of the traffic of this character could just as well take another street. Employers of the truck drivers who are losing money because their outfits subject themselves to delay in crowding into Calhoun street when it is wholly unnecessary and when much more time is certain to be consumed on the route than if another street were traversed, can do much to relieve the condition by insistence on the change. A mounted traffic officer, armed with definite police instructions to forbid the use of Calhoun street to the big vehicles when it is not absolutely necessary, would be able to do infinitely more to relieve the cause for complaint.

Now they warn us to be prepared for higher prices on canned vegetables this winter because the general crop will not average more than half the normal production. Somehow, the public is coming to expect this sort of thing. The real shock will come when finally something or other of the necessities takes a price turn in the other direction to a degree that the purchaser can appreciate when he buys it.

Fort Wayne's death rate for June was 10.7 according to the report of the state board of health. The figures for Indianapolis were 15.1; for Evansville, 15; for Terre Haute, 12.2. Make your own selection of the healthiest city in which to live.

In a series of flying squadron roundups on Sunday, Indianapolis police made a total of 165 arrests on gambling and liquor-selling charges. The result makes it apparent that the lid in the capital city is in need of a bit finer adjustment before it can be considered dependably air-tight.

It is evident that those Lakeside people have reached the conclusion that if Fort Wayne is to have flood prevention, it is up to them to keep the project from a lingering but none the less certain death.

PRAISE FOR WILSON.

(Baltimore Sun.)

We do not wish to "crow over" the old school of diplomacy, but it will sadly learn a lesson from the Washington schoolmaster. Its mistakes were natural from its point of view, which is the old point of view and the worldly point of view. Its disciples failed to see that there was another and a wiser and better viewpoint. They failed to appreciate the fact that it pays quite as well in international affairs as in individual affairs to consider the moral side of questions. And they failed, finally, to realize the true conditions in Mexico and to see that only such a policy as the president's offered the hope of a permanent cure for a situation which it was to the interest of Europe as well as the United States to bring to an end.

Though Mexico is not yet out of her troubles, Mr. Wilson has helped her forward mightily by peaceful means on the road toward permanent liberation and stable government. And every step which she takes in that direction will be as much for the benefit of other countries as for her own. Thus the policy which the old-fashioned builders of nations rejected promises to become the head of the corner with constructive statement of the future, and the desired diplomatic amateur has rendered a double service to Mexico and the world—the establishment of a standard of peaceful diplomacy which conserving and practical interests makes duty and obligation the first principle of the international code.

MARRYING TO REFORM.

(Pittsburg Dispatch.)

An Elizabeth, (N. J.) judge suspended sentence upon a young man of that town, charged with drunkenness, with the admonition: "You drink too much, young man, and you need a wife to take care of you. If you're not married in thirty days I'll have you brought back here." Indignant protest has followed from women who point out that the judge is really sentencing the woman at the same time if the young man finds one willing to take the rick of trying to reform him by marriage.

Belief in the reformatory effect of matrimony is not so general or so confident as it once was. It is admitted that there have been cases where it worked, but it is argued that the proportion is so small as to be insignificant compared to the number where it failed. Also, as some of this Jersey judge's women critics point out, women are paying more attention to the risks of matrimony, looking more carefully to the character of prospective husbands and consequently are less inclined to sacrifice themselves in the chance of reforming some man who may be beyond reforming. Others may figure that if a man can not be reformed before marriage there is little hope of his being reformed afterwards. If the woman he desires to marry has not sufficient influence to reform him before she weds him it is problematical whether she ever will have.

Aside from the anticipated and practically obsolete theory which this Jersey jurist prescribed, it may be asked by what authority he undertook to impose such a condition. There are too many judges, mostly in the police and other minor courts, who attempt the Solomonic role and only make themselves ridiculous. This might not matter, but they make the administration of law ridiculous at the same time. Some sort of recall for such "judges" is urgently neded.

PARIS CINDERELLS WEDS OIL KING.

CHARLES VICTOR HALL AND HIS PARISIAN BRIDE.

Los Angeles, July 21.—Two years ago Rita Soutan, with face as fair as the flowers she sold, stood on the streets of Paris and smilingly offered a nosegay for a few centimes to Charles Victor Hall, millionaire oil king of California.

Following her adoption by Hall and the subsequent divorce of his wife, a romantic sentiment between the petite flower girl and her elderly guardian culminated in marriage.

Returning recently with her husband to the land where he made his fortune, the Parisian Cinderella dazzled the Angeline "400" with one of the most marvelous trousseau ever displayed on two continents.

So "extreme" are many of the costly French gowns of Mrs. Hall that she has given up trying to wear them in public. Even in Paris they attracted decided attion, Mrs. Hall admits.

"I wear them now simply for my husband," she says with twinkling eyes. "One night in Paris on returning from the theater we were surrounded by a throng of people curious to see my clothes. The traffic was blocked for several minutes—and that was in Paris, too!"

Mrs. Hall admits with a pout that she will be compelled to modify her toilette for the more sober taste of the west. Nevertheless she is too truly a child of Paris to be happy in ordinary clothes. They must all be "creations."

Her shopping will be done via cablegram to Paris, where, in her "pet" establishment specially trained milliners and tailors will supply her needs at short notice.

In case she should be dissatisfied even then, Mrs. Hall will personally alter the importations, for she is deft with the needle and has for just such contingencies a wonderful collection of rare laces collected in Brussels.

She wears a hat but a single time.

"I do not wish to set new styles in Los Angeles," she said. "I wear pretty clothes simply because I am a woman—because I love them. They are only for my husband's pleasure and my own. I happen to like Parisian gowns best, so I will never wear any others."

Fashion rules made for herself by Mrs. Charles Victor Hall, French bride of California oil magnate:

She will never wear the same hat twice.

She will not appear in any of her Parisian trousseau gowns in the west without modifying them.

Will never buy a gown elsewhere than in Paris, and will do most of her shopping by cablegram.

WILSON TO VISIT CHICAGO.

President Likely to Attend Reserve Bank Conference Here.

Washington, July 21.—President Wilson has not yet replied to the invitation of the Illinois Bankers' association to attend the national conference on the federal reserve act, beginning September 1, but that he will accept was indicated by a letter he sent to a senator today. Explaining his inability to come to the senator's state at that time, the president said he would be in Chicago and the middle west. He will deliver addresses on the achievements of the administration.

GARY RIVER CHANGE O. K.

Council Approves Removal of Grand Calumet for Steel Mills.

Gary, Ind., July 21.—The Gary council last night approved the action of the Indiana Steel and Gary Land companies in changing the course of the Grand Calumet river so that the steel work could be built. Her Little Joke May Cost Millions.

London, Eng., July 20.—Just because Mrs. Waldorf Astor, jr., made a jocular remark concerning the tightened strings of her father-in-law's money bags, the elder Astor, who is an expatriated American seeking a dukedom, threatens to disinherit her husband. Mrs. Astor was one of the four beautiful Langhorne sisters famous by the Charles Dana Gibson pictures.

ROSS CHARD WAS VERY HOMESICK

Took Life in Hands for a Desperate Start and Lands in Cell.

"I was homesick and I wanted to get back to Angola and mother's boarding house awful bad. That's the only reason I know."

Ross Chard, young, tall, thin, swarthy and clad in blue overalls, was explaining in the city court to Judge Kerr why, after Officer Bert Smith had picked him from the street, found him a lodging place for the night at no cost to himself he had made a desperate escape from the hostelry, shinned down a fire escape to the street and taken to his heels. Officer Smith found Chard sitting weary and forlorn at the entrance of the Transfer saloon on West Main street, about 9:30 Monday night. The fellow told a good story of quitting work on a farm north of Fort Wayne and wanting to get to Garrett and thence home to Angola. He was taken to the interurban terminal, where it was developed he had no money to pay his fare. The officer took him to a Pearl street lodging house and paid for his bed. Chard retired and in the silent watches of the night made a perilous journey from the window of his room over some wires to the fire escape and thence to the ground. Later, he fell in with a couple of hoboes and Officer Smith landed the whole trio for loitering. Judge Kerr let Chard hike for Angola, and George Pallace and John Wike, his companions in the pinch, were given permission to start for Baltimore, where they said they wanted to be put off.

Made War on Officer.

Jim Donovan wore some cubist presentments on his once fair countenance and it was explained by himself that the ornamentations ensued from a lively conflict with Officer Bert Smith when the minion of the law tried to boost him into the patrol wagon. He was drunk, had been tossed out of a mission house for creating a disturbance and was in general having a bad-man time when he was pinched. He went over for fifteen days.

Officer Smith also had the pleasure of listening to George Kelly's opinion of policemen when he pinched Kelly for being drunk and begging on the street. Kelly has a phony crippled arm and he has been turning it to cash account about the streets. Fifteen days were wished on him by the court and he went over feeling sore about it.

Other City Court Cases.

Clint O'Brien, a shambling and unkempt vag, was given $5 and costs and Tom Till, an aged loiterer claiming to hail from Hillsdale, Mich., who said he came down here with the idea of getting into a hospital, was directed to the township trustees for help.

Dolt Johnson, who comes in from Van Wert occasionally to refresh himself in a manner forbidden by law in his home town, drifted in again Monday, was pinched and will spend eleven days in jail.

"Whisky Bill" Dodacker was given eleven days in which to get sober. [illegible] court, was charged with disorderly conduct and his wife was present as a witness. His case was continued until the 24th and he went to jail in default of $100 bond.

William Bedford, a pie merchant, testified that as he was going past a liquor store at the northeast corner of Main and Harrison streets, William Butts, colored porter, first tripped him with a sprinkling hose and then threatened him with a knife when Bedford protested. There were no other witnesses save the complainant and the defendant. Butts strenuously denied the charge of assault and battery and said he had never before seen his accuser. Judge Kerr took the case under advisement until Wednesday morning.

Elmer West, a loiterer held for several days for investigation, was turned loose. He was trying to sell some automobile tools when arrested.

YOUNG WIFE HELD FOR FORGERY

Mrs. May Clinton, aged 20 years, and residing at 924 Clinton street, has been put under a recognizance bond for appearance in the circuit court on a charge of forgery. She was given a hearing in the city court Monday afternoon. Mrs. Clinton strenuously and persistently denied her guilt, but the evidence was conclusive. A week ago she telephoned the "juvenile shop" of Miss Gerow, on East Wayne street, that she wanted a number of infant's garments sent for approval to the home of Mrs. Catherine Sommers, 122 East Washington street and would send a boy for them, which she did. The boy returned with each of [illegible] taken pay for the kept apparel and $6.75 in change was returned. The check was found to be worthless and Detective Joseph Brennan was put on the case. He found the boy, who identified the woman as to the detective and Miss Gerow went to Mrs. Clinton's home and found the garments that had been kept. Mrs. Clinton's signature is in writing identical with that on the check, as is a check for $4 taken by the Lichtsinn & Peters grocery, on East Wayne street, made payable to and endorsed by "Mrs. Oeilig" and signed "Mrs. Gates Horton." Mrs. Clinton is a daughter of the late Sam Miner, well known in sporting circles in Fort Wayne a few years ago.

Would You Love to Have a Pleasing Personality? Certainly. Well Then---

Beverly Bane Will Tell You in The Sentinel Just How It is Done—"Every Woman Can Use the Fine Art of Pantomime," Declares Noted "Movie" Star.

(Written for The Sentinel.)

After writing, "All women long for beauty" some thousand times, I find I have been unconsciously telling an untruth.

I have learned that women do not long for beauty, but for the power to please—and I have learned it from the "movies."

Women care little for that kind of beauty that appeals to the eye only—that kind of beauty seldom lasts. What woman wants is to be pleasing all her life long, and to do this Beverly Bayne says she must not only have grace, but graciousness.

Of the color of her eyes she need not be particular if those same "windows of the soul" show it to be pure and sweet.

Even her complexion—that bugbear of all those who subscribe to the old beauty cult—may boast of a freckle or two and still she may be the most popular woman in her set. Youth is not necessary to make one universally pleasing. Indeed, most of the women who have put their names, as beauties, on the scroll of time have been past their first youth.

Beauty as we know it is not a question of form, complexion, eyes, nose, mouth or any other physical attribute of the human family.

Take Lillian Russell for example: Because she is universally acclaimed "most beautiful." There are thousands of women today who have as fine a skin and coloring as this professional beauty.

You must please before you open your mouth—you must make your inner self to overshadow all the imperfections that may belong to your other self.

And how will you do it?

Watch the girls on the "movie" screen.

All the "movie" stars are not physically beautiful, and the camera is not kind to even the loveliest of them.

It catches the expression of the slightest emotion. It photographs emotions and thoughts of which even the subjects who pass before its all-seeing eye are not conscious.

It depicts personality to the minutest detail.

With this idea in mind, I have asked Miss Beverly Bayne, of the Essanay Film company, the society actress who has been acclaimed by Mr. Francis Bushman, "the most popular movie heroine," "the girl with the sweetest personality in the movies," to help me tell how to acquire and cultivate this one thing which makes an ugly woman beautiful and the lack of which makes beautiful women ugly.

She has also especially posed for the pictures that will illustrate these stories.

BEVERLY BAYNE SAYS: "A Woman Must Not Only Have Grace, But Graciousness, if She Would Be Called Beautiful."

CAROLINE COE TELLS HOW TO DO THE SUMMER CANNING.

By (Caroline Coe.)

Make use of all the vegetables that grow in your garden. Don't think you must have them by the basket. Put up a can of beans today, peas tomorrow and so on. You will be surprised how little time it has taken and how great the result.

Any vegetable to be canned must be absolutely fresh. If it seems wilted or at all decayed do not waste time, fire, jars and patience putting it up, for it will not keep.

Corn, if gathered fresh and at once canned, is one of the best of vegetables, although many claim the home-made articles is very difficult "to keep" without a preservative. This is not true. Vegetables, taken care of in a cleanly way according to the recipes given below, will "keep" perfectly.

If a few vegetables only are at hand use a kettle to cook them in, in place of the boiler. When canning a great many, do not put the jars on the bottom of the kettle or boiler, as they will break. A strip of wire gauze cut to fit, a little straw or strips of wood can be used to keep the cans off the bottom.

Cauliflower.

MRS. COE PHOTOGRAPHED IN HER OWN KITCHEN.

Trim cauliflower and allow to stand in salt water half an hour. Pull flowers apart; place in boiling salt water and cook until tender, not soft. Cool with running water. Pack in jars, being careful not to fill so full as to crush the shape of the flowers. To one quart of cold water add one teaspoon of salt. Boil and allow to cool. Fill jars. Put [illegible] on rack with cold water to depth of half the can.

Put cover on boiler, bring slowly to boiling point and let boil two hours. Lift out cans. See that covers are perfectly tight.

Tomatoes and Corn.

Boil corn on the cob twenty minutes. [illegible]

To each quart of corn add two quarts of tomatoes. Salt to taste. Boil hard five minutes. Seal quickly. Be sure tops are perfectly tight. It is a good plan to turn paraffine around where top and rubber meet.

Canned Pumpkin.

Scrape out seeds and cut in half. Put in oven and bake until all the pulp may be scraped from the skin. Mash with potato masher. To each quart of pumpkin add a teaspoon of salt and a half teaspoon of ginger. Heat to boiling and can while hot.

When ready to use open can and turn pumpkin out on platter for an hour or so before using.

Canned Corn.

The simplest way to can corn is to cut corn from cob, not too closely, and scrape cob well to get all the juice.

To five quarts of the corn add one pint of table salt. Put in large granite kettle and boil one and one-half hours. Have tin cans piping hot.

Do not allow corn to stop boiling. Fill cans to top. Force on cover and turn hot rosin or sealing wax around edge of cover. Cover cans with a heavy blanket to allow to cool slowly. When ready to serve rinse once in clear, cold water, drain head up and season to taste.

Canned Peas.

Shell peas and pack closely in cans. Add to each quart one teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of sugar dissolved in a little water. Fill jars with water. Put on covers, set jars in boiler on rack and fill boiler with water enough to come up three or four inches on jars and boil three hours. Put in boiling water if needed to keep water three or four inches deep. After boiling three hours fasten tops and rubbers. Seal tightly. Cool slowly in boiler.

Canned Beats.

Use small sweet beets. Boil until tender and skin. Pack jars with beets and fill to top with water salted in proportion of one teaspoon of salt to each quart and half cup of vinegar.

Adjust tops to cans and place in boiler on rack and boil forty-five minutes. When slightly cool run beeswax around edge of cover.

Carrots may be canned in this way.

Lima Beans.

Shell beans, pack in cans with one teaspoon of salt to each quart of beans, fill can with clear cold water and proceed same as for peas.

String Beans.

Cut off both ends of beans, string carefully and cut into any desired size. Boil in water with salt in proportion of one teaspoon to each quart of water. When boiling thoroughly drain and again pour salt water in same proportion and cook until tender but not soft.

Pack beans in sterilized jars. Fill with boiling water in which they were boiled. Put two rubbers in jar. Screw on tops and screw down tight. Put in dark paper bag and store for winter.

Tomatoes.

Select tomatoes of even size and not too large to go into the cans without cutting. The bright red variety look prettiest. Scald tomatoes by dipping into boiling water. Remove, peel and put in large preserving kettle. When bottom of kettle is covered add (for twenty tomatoes) one even tablespoon each of salt and sugar.

Boil thirty minutes without stirring. Take up each tomato and carefully put in can until can is full. Turn over enough juice to fill can to top. Adjust rubber and top. Screw as tight as possible and wrap in dark paper bag.

NEW DEVICE FOR THE NECK.

The radical changes in the matter of our coiffure have had their effect not only on the shape and style of the hats that are to be worn during the season, but in the important region of our necks. Happily these are still to be left bare—a pretty and hygienic fashion that we are glad to be allowed to cling to. The nape of the neck especially is such a pretty part of the feminine anatomy that any device for displaying it and exploiting its charms is to be welcomed. The arrangement of the hair on the top of the head has been an advantage to all pretty necks, and it has been decreed further by the powers that order these things that even the high Medici collar that threatened concealment of the back of the neck is to be joined to corsages cut very low at the back, and to stand well out from it. All collars, in fact, have a tendency to curve outward and backward so as to leave the neck as visible and untrammelled as possible. The Medici collars are made in tulle, chiffon or lace in an endless variety of becoming shapes, and wired tightly but firmly with featherbone to give them just the "stand-upness" that is necessary to their success. Other collars of the flat persuasion meant for wearing with tailormades are in fine white lawn or voile and hemstitched.

Carpenter aprons at the Patterson-Fletcher store.

NEW GARTERS.

Lace is now so much the vogue that it is used as a trimming on all kinds of feminine accessories and dainty necessities. A very pleasing pair of garters made in the latest mode have the lace covering. The elastic is first covered with pink satin ribbon and over this a piece of lace insertion is applied. The insertion is as long as the ribbon, so that it will give with it and wide enough to form a frill along both edges of garter. The lace is, of course, just put on the outside of the covered elastic. The garters are then decorated with a smart bow of narrow picot edged blue ribbon or with a bunch of small roses and forget-me-nots. A pair of these garters would make a most attractive gift for a bridal trousseau.

SICK PLANTS NURSED BY UNCLE SAM'S HIGH-SALARIED "PLANT DOCTOR."

Washington, D. C., July 20.—Coddling sick grape vines and nursing ailing blackberry bushes is the every day occupation of Mrs. Flora Wambaugh Patterson, one of the highest salaried women in the employment of the United States government.

In the national bureau of plant industry Mrs. Patterson is known as "chief of the department of pathological exchange," which in plain English cal exchang," which in plain English menas that all plants and shrubs imported into the United States must be examined by Mrs. Patterson and her assistants before they are distributed to the farmers and the gardeners throughout the country.

This woman scientist stands as a shield between the American farmer and the plant disease germs of Europe.

It's Mrs. Patterson's business to bar from this country any plant affected by fungus disease or any infection that might be disastrous to the agricultural interests of the country.

Each shipment of blackberry bushes grape vines or mushrooms is carefully inspected. If a tendency to disease is discovered, the affected plants are sent into quarantine, just like sick folks, and they are kept in their beds of straw and sand until government experts decide whether they are really sick or just wilted. If they have a disease that would make them dangerous to crops and other vegetation they are destroyed in a bonfire. If the government scientists can cure them they are released for distribution.

START DOUBLES IN TENNIS PLAY

Local Cracks Put Up Hard Battle With Indianpolis Experts.

Tuesday morning's play in the annual Northern Indiana tennis tournament on the Country club courts reached the men's doubles and announcement was made by the committee on entries that play would begin late in the afternoon in women's singles. Charles Trask, of Indianapolis, who was the feature of the opening day of the tournament, did not play Tuesday morning, but some exciting tennis was shown in the doubles between Henricks and Techantine of Indianapolis and Gawehn and Riggin, of Fort Wayne.

This go was the last match of the morning schedule and the play ended with the score for the two sets standing at 6-4, 6-4 in favor of the Indianapolis racquet cracks. The Fort Wayne men made a splendid showing and as during the first day's play, both Riggin and Gawehn showed exceptional form, playing both sets hard until the last and those who witnessed the match were unable for a time to even estimate the outcome of the matches. Techantine playing close to the net in turn slammed across some of the swiftest balls of the tournament thus far, while each of the four gained repeated points in serving.

The Scores.

Scores made during the morning were as follows:

Singles.

Henry Wick defeated Edward Miller, 6-0, 6-1.

T. G. Scheid defeated Morris Seelberg, 6-0, 6-4.

Jack Eaglesfield defeated Lewis Ewing, 6-0, 6-1.

G. Gooder defeated Trafford Wilson, 6-2, 6-3.

Doubles.

Bond and Fisher defeated Lipkey and Guild, 6-4, 6-1.

MacKrell and Thomas defeated Miller and Miller, 6-2, 6-0.

Public is Invited.

The tennis committee of the Country club and the committees in charge of the tournament wish it understood that the public is cordially invited to visit the courts and witness all the matches of the tournament. The play is to continue during the remainder of the week and some exciting and sensational playing is anticipated during the latter part of the week.

The crowd of spectators witnessing the second day's games lined on all sides of the courts and noted among those present were many from out of the city.

First Day's Results.

Gordon E. Riggin won from J. J. Miller, 6-1; 6-0.

Charles Trask won from Gordon E. Riggin, 6-0; 6-1.

Norman Olds won from E. Hulbert Ginn by default.

Norman Olds won from Frank Hawkins, 6-2; 6-0.

Thomas Hendricks won from John C. Hoffman, 6-3; 6-3.

James Porter won from Beckenstein by default.

Leslie Gooder won from John Schweiters, 6-2; 6-2.

J. Ewing Bond won from W. F. Miller, 6-1; 6-3.

Frank Techantine won from E. J. Gawehn, 6-1; 6-1.

Ed Dochterman won from Elmer Weil, 6-4; 6-4.

George Cullen Thomas won from Hal Y. Reiter, 6-1; 6-2.

Joseph A. Berghoff won from George Fishering, 6-0; 6-1.

A. L. Andrews won from G. A. Moore, 6-2; 6-3.

G. R. Gawehn won from Albert Black, 6-0; 6-0.

Trafford Wilson won from William Moffett, 6-4; 3-6; 6-4.

Stock in the new home has been taken up readily and at the meeting every member will find out exactly what has been done.

MACCABEES VOTE TO MERGE.

Delegates at Detroit Pave Way for Union of Orders.

Detroit, Mich., July 21.—By unanimous vote, delegates representing the Knights of Maccabees in every state and the Canadian provinces, voted here yesterday in favor of amalgamation of the order with the Knights of the Modern Maccabees. The latter organization ratified the proposed amalgamation at a meeting in Bay City a few weeks ago. The new organization will be known as "The Maccabees." Detroit will be the headquarters for the world, it was announced. It was stated that there would be no unusual change in the rules or by-laws of either society.

MAYOR ROBERTS PAYS FINE.

Indianapolis, July 21.—Attorneys for Dean M. Roberts, mayor of Terre Haute, have paid into the federal court $158.80, the amount of the fine and costs in the recent contempt case. Roberts interfered with the cleaning of a sewer in Terre Haute after the work had been ordered done by Federal Judge Anderson.

And Its Companions

Sixty-two years ago advertising was very different from what it is today. Merchants advertised, to be sure, but not in the lively manner they do today. For example, we print here a reproduction of the first advertisement ever run for this business. This very same advertisement ran for many months in the same location of the paper without a word of change.

Other ads appearing in this old paper are interesting today. There is the advertisement of a book store, announcing the new arrival of more copies of "Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's new and thrilling story entitled Uncle Tom's Cabin." The paper is full of lottery advertisements that would get our present postal officials jumping in a minute. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was advertised that long ago, and there appear such familiar names as Bass & Emrick, grocers. The legal lights who advertised 62 years ago were Worden & Hoagland, L. M. Ninde and Colerick & Withers.

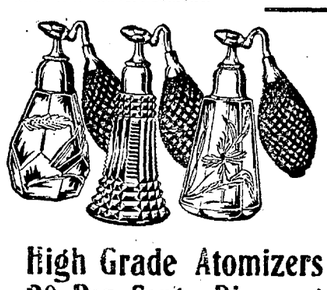

The news columns, hard as they were to read, have much of interest to present-day readers. The Times was glad to note that there would be a railroad convention at Warsaw, which was to take steps to secure the completion of the Pennsylvania and Ohio railroad, to run via Fort Wayne, Warsaw, Plymouth, Laporte and Valparaiso.

Conditions in Mexico were reported as deplorable. Government officials were starving to death at Durango because they could not collect their salaries.

A letter from the representative in congress which took over two weeks to get to Fort Wayne was "fearful that the time of adjournment will be changed to a later date."

There was then on an agitation for a protective tariff, and the "infant industries" of America were receiving their first attention from political parties.

Those were the companions of our first advertisement. How different, and how similar, things are today can be judged from the reading of this paper and this advertisement.

All Thought of Profit Is Cast Aside In Commemoration of Our Long Life. We want All to Join Us In This Celebration.

¶ Sixty-two years ago there was established in the town of Fort Wayne a "New Drug Store" which was destined to become the largest institution of its kind in the state. Quality of goods, low prices and efficient service have caused this business to grow from one store to four, besides establishing a big drug store at Anderson, Ind., the smallest of which now does a bigger business than the original store a number of years ago. All this week we celebrate our birth and our growth. This Anniversary Sale is truly a birthday party. Come at whatever hour you can.

FIND BAD PLACES IN INTERCEPTER

Inspection Discloses That Arch is Ready to give Way at New Point.

Ambrose Geary, sewer repair superintendent for the city, accompanied by an employe of the department, made an inspection of about 600 feet of the intercepting sewer between the Walda foundry and Walton avenue, Tuesday morning, and found a place where the arch has been compressed from above until it is believed to be in danger of giving way. So low was the arch depressed that it was necessary for the inspectors to almost crawl under it. It is believed that it will be necessary to definitely locate the place and sink a shaft from the surface of the ground in order to make repairs. With electric searchlights the men examined the walls of the sewer's interior and found other places that show the work was not well done.

Mayor Hosey stated Tuesday that so far as he has been able to determine the masonry of the sewer consists of but two courses of brick instead of three as required by the contract. Certainly that part of the sewer exposed by the repair work on the big break below Erie street at Howard, consists of but two courses. The mayor is wondering how much of the sewer was skimped in that way by the contractor. He says it ought to be possible for the city to sue the contractor on his bond for that kind of work, but doubts if it is possible.

Another shortcoming is the absence of manholes at definite intervals. For eighteen hundred feet along the eastern part of the sewer there are no manholes, according to the mayor, and he says that east of the Spy Run avenue bridge several manholes have disappeared.

Masons are at work closing up the breach in the sewer arch at Howard street and as soon as that is done the tremendous task of cleaning the big drain, which seems to be more or less clogged fo rits entire length, will be started. It will be a long and costly job, but it must be done and the board of works will bend its efforts to accomplish the work at the earliest possible day that the sewer may be put in condition to perform its work.

TESTING QUALITY OF GAS.

Expert from State Utilities Commission Visits Fort Wayne.

Russell N. Gavit, meter inspector and gas expert for the Indiana public service commission, is in Fort Wayne making a test of the quality of gas furnished consumers by the Indiana Lighting company. Mr. Gavit set up his apparatus, which is quite elaborate, in the laboratory of the city health department, and made his tests there. The gas is tested for its heat units. The readings of the tests will be caculated by Mr. Gavit and the results forwarded as a report to the utilities commission. If the gas is shown to be below the approved standard the gas company will be notified that the quality of its product must be raised. The result of the test will be made known in a few days, it is expected.

REARRANGE HEALTH WORK.

One Inspector Will Give Atttention to Quarantine Duties.

A plan for rearranging the work of the sanitary officers of the health department has been worked out by President H. O. Bruggeman and Secretary J. H. Gilpin. One inspector will be assigned exclusively to contagious disease and quarantine work and the other officers will be put on inspection work for the balance of the heated term to look after garbage, vaults, alleys and back yards. It is believed that in this way greater efficiency can be obtained than by dividing the work of different kinds among all of them. At this season complaints are numerous and furnish enough work for two officers. Meat and Milk Inspector E. A. Schott, who has just returned from his vacation, and Deputy Inspector Charles Josse will devote their time to meat, milk, restaurant, grocery and meat market inspection.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT BUDGET.

The health department is, as usual, the first to complete its budget for the ensuing year. The last budget asked for the following: Sanitary police, $2,460; meat and dairy inspection, $2,640; salaries of board, $2,590; contagious disease prevention, $2,000 incidentals, $225. This year's budget will be the same, except that $720 additional will be asked for one more sanitary officer and $300 will be asked for the incidental account.

FIND ANOTHER INFECTED RAT.

No New Cases of Bubonic Plague Reported at New Orleans.

New Orleans, July 21.—A rat captured at the Dumaine street wharf was infected with bubonic plague, according to announcement today by Dr. W. C. Ricker, assistant surgeon general in charge of the plague fight. This is the sixth infected rat captured.

No new cases had been reported up to this afternoon, and with one exception those at the isolation hospital were improving rapidly.

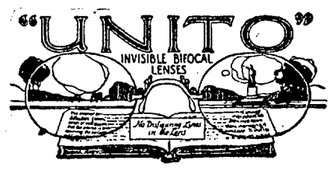

The condition of Helen Soell, 10, who developed the disease last week, still was considered dangerous.

WANTED—Cigar clerk. Anthony hotel.

John Rhinesmith of West Jefferson street, who went to Warren, O., on a visit, has been ill there for a fortnight, but is now convalescing.

Poorly made furniture, of unseasoned wood or cheap materials, can be made to look all right with a few coats of low grade varnish or shoddy upholstery—but take it home and use it and you will soon be convinced there is really much more in quality than in price. Foster's.

The Man and the Fly

Do you remember Poe's story of the man who was frightened out of his wits seeing a huge monster coming out of the woods near his home? He discovered that the monster was a common house fly crawling across the window pane near his eyes, which were focussed on the distant woods. His eyes had played him a trick.

Small objects seem very big when they are close to the eyes. The line that separates the two lenses of the ordinary bifocal glasses soon becomes an exasperating obstruction to sight.

This obstruction has been removed in our Toritor bifocals, the double glasses that look like one. No lines, no cement—perfect vision far and near—that's what they offer you. Ground in our own factory at a moderate cost.

No Charge for Examination — ROGERS EYESIGHT SPECIALIST — Glasses From $1.50 Up.

New Head of Police in Chicago District Ruled by Hinky Dink.

Chicago, July 21.—A cleaning out such as the old south side levee has never known, was promised today with the advent of Captain Max Nootbar, as the commanding police officer in that quarter in the place of Captain Ryan, transferred. That Captain Nootbar's efforts might be thwarted by aldermanic influence credited to the councilmen from the First ward. Michael (Hinky Dink) Kenna and John (Bathhouse) Coughlan, received little attention from the new police captain. "I don't know anyone who can give me orders but Chief Gleason," said Nootbar.

While the new broom was preparing to sweep the ill-favored quarter the chief of police and other officers attended the funeral of Detective Sergeant Stanley J. Birns, the victim of a shooting affray in Twenty-second street Thursday night when many revolver shots were exchanged between two policemen and two specially detailed members of the morals squad. Investigation of the causes of the fatal shooting were continued today by the civil service commission, the police and the states attorney. James Colisimo, one of the southside levee powers, was taken into custody by the police. He would not talk.

The prosecutor contends that there was a plot to attack the members of the morals squad and that the conflict between the two groups of policemen threw the plan awry.

Gunman Was Imported.

States Attorney Hoyne today asserted that Rocco Venille, accused of starting the shooting which led to the death of Detective Birns, was a New York gunman who had been sent here after the electrocution of the murderers of Herman Rosenthal.

Hoyne asserted he had evidence that he was sent to Chicago to aid in a plot to put W. C. Dannenberg, police inspector of morals, and the men on his staff out of the way so that vice in Chicago would not be interfered with. Hoyne continued:

"Venille came to Chicago as an employe of the men who are masters of commercialized vice in this country, for the purpose of killing Dannenberg and his men. He came here to organize a select gang of gunmen of which he was to be the leader.

"Venille fired the first shot last Thursday night and he was wounded in one toe of the right foot. He was hurried to St. Anthony's hospital and gave his name as Frank Landan, a brick layer. He said a stray bullet deflected by a wall struck him. We kept watch of him and found that he was taken to another hospital where we have him under surveillance."

IS EXPELLD FROM GARY.

ADVENTURES OF JOHNNY MOUSE.

Chas. S. Bash and Others Make New Move in Little River Ditch.

Huntington, Ind., July 21.—An error in transcribing stenographer's notes of seemingly little importance may change fate of the now famous Little river ditch which is opposed by residents of the far eastern part of Huntington county and the western section of Allen county. A decision favoring the construction of the ditch, was given in the circuit court about three yearsago. Later the case was appealed to supreme court of Indiana.

A suit to bring about a change in the records concerning the trial of the ditch case was filed in circuit court Monday afternoon by attorneys for Charles S. Bash and others, who oppose the construction of the ditch. The case was appealed from the Huntington court by Mr. Bash and other residents of Allen and Huntington counties.

In the complaint it is charged that John Etzold, Huntington court reporter, erred when he typewrote the testimony given in the trial. According to the complaint, figures as to the cost of the drain were not transcribed correctly.

It is said if the allegations of the appellants prove true, the ruling of the supreme court as to the fate of the ditch will be influenced to a great degree.

Many rural residents of the eastern part of Huntington county signed the petition for the construction of the Little river ditch. The ditch controversy has created much interest and its trial proved one of intense interest, the court room being filled by residents of the proposed ditch territory.

Daniel W. Zintsmaster and others were named defendants in the suit filed in the Huntington court Monday afternoon.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS NEAR

Representative Rauch, of Marion, Sees Closing by August 25.

Indianapolis, July 21.—Congressman George Rauch, of the Eleventh Indiana district, brought to Indianapolis to-day the most cheerful news that has emanated from Washington in many a day. He said:

"I am quite sure that the congress will adjourn on or before August 25." He did not say why he was sure of it, but he talked as if he knew what he was talking about.

"I do not believe it will take long to finish up the anti-trust legislation," he said: "When the bills are finally passed and sent to the president they will be in such shape as will be satisfactory to the administration and everybody else."

Mr. Rauch said his visit to Indianapolis had no political significance—"merely a little personal business," he said.

REFUGEES STILL HELD UP.

Puerto, Mexico, July 21.—Another delay has occurred in the departure of Mexican refugees from this port. The steamship Mexico, it is announced, is not coming here and this apparently leaves as the next opportunity the Buenos Ayres on Thursday. That vessel does not touch at Jamaica, unless by special provision, but does call at Vera Cruz, an incident that may be distasteful to most of the Mexicans marooned here. Practically all of them are still aboard the British cruiser Bristol as they are too nervous to step ashore. All the troops who came here from Mexico City have left and everything is quiet.

Washington, July 21.—Chairman Newlands, of the senate interstate commerce committee, said today that the last of the administration anti-trust program, the railroad securities bill, would be perfected and ready tomorrow for submission to the senate with the Calyton bill. As now agreed upon the bill would give the interstate commerce commission authority over the issuance of all securities by common cariers, with power to investigate proposed improvements for which funds are sought to approve issues if deemed necessary or advantageous. The commission also would be given power to go into court to enjoin a bond issue if made in violation of its order. Electric railroads, unless they constitute a part of the railroad system, would be exempted.

DESERTED 20 TIMES, SHE SAYS.

Columbus Woman Sues for Divorce, Not for Desertion, But for Cruelty.

Columbus, Ind., July 21.—Mrs. Edward Haney has filed suit in the circuit court for divorce and states that her husband deserted her twenty times. However, she does not allege desertion. Instead, she alleges cruel and inhuman treatment declaring that the many desertions constituted such treatment. She declares her husband tore off her clothing, beat her, spat in her face, called her names, and failed to provide her with food, clothing or medicine.

CO-OPERATION IS GREATEST NEED

Charles Pierce Says Labor Should Be Given a Responsible Status.

Chicago, July 21.—Need of co-operation of employes with employers was emphasized today in the testimony of Charles Pierce, formerly president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, before the United States commission on industrial relations and conditions. "If the workingmen arbitrarily set a measure of what a day's task shall be," said Mr. Pierce, "our task is hopeless. I must have the co-operation of the men under me."

Restriction of output by the unions was complained of by Mr. Pierce, who gave figures which he said showed the difference in production under union agreements and under unrestricted conditions.

"I consider organization properly conducted the best means for bringing about the best relationship between employers and workmen," said Mr. Pierce.

"The union should be made financially responsible for breaking contracts. No irresponsible body of men should be permitted to commit destructive and dangerous acts. They should be responsible for breaches of agreement. That is essential for collective bargaining. The incorporation of unions should beeffected."

After the shooting the girl ran to her own home, where she told her mother, shielding her brother from blame and insisting that it was only an accident.

ARM CRUSHED NEAR SHOULDER

L. C. Layton Missed Hand Bar and Fell Beneath the Wheels.

Lyman C. Layton, a Pennsylvania switchman, displayed remarkable physical endurance and great presence of mind at 3:50 o'clock Monday afternoon, when he alighted from the cab of an engine at the Pennsylvania depot, supporting by his right hand, his left arm, which was severed except for a few shreds of flesh and skin a few inches above the elbow, walked down one of the stairs leading from the train sheds to the depot as a stretcher was being taken up the baggage elevator to get him. Reaching the concourse, he passed out of it, got into a taxicab and was driven to St. Joseph hospital, where surgical attention was given him by Dr. C. B. Stemen and Dr. Budd Van Swearingen.

Mr. Layton, who since the reduction of the crews at the yards has been serving as a freight brakeman, went with a switching crew to the industrial track at the Egley-Doan Elevator company in the western part of the city, to handle some cars. He had just closed a switch and ran to the string of cars to get on one of them, when he missed his hold and fell in such manner that the wheels of one pair of trucks passed over his arm, severing it as stated, and bruised his head and body in several places. He arose, walked to the engine and climbed unassisted in the cab, when he sat upright on the fireman's seat, while he was being hurriedly taken to the passenger depot. There an ambulance was awaiting him, but he chose the taxicab, as stated. At the hospital the surgeons amputated the mangled arm near the shoulder and dressed the other wounds and they say that unless complications set in, Mr. Layton will recover.

The injured man was for several years a yard conductor and was among those effected by the reduction of the forces several weeks ago. At that time he assumed the work of yard brakeman and was thus engaged when he received the injuries mentioned. He is married and resides at 1328 Anthony boulevard.

ADDED THREE CREWS.

Freight Movement Over Pennsylvania Shows Increase.

Three firemen have been advanced to extra freight engineers and three freight firemen have been advanced to the passenger service to take the places of the men advanced to engineers on the Pennsylvania, indicating an improvement in the volume of freight moving over the line, though it is not very marked. Grain is beginning to move towards the seaboard and with a slight increase in the movement of other freight, business on the Pennsylvania is moving forward, but the business is far from normal as yet. The passenger firemen advanced to freight engineers yesterday were L. F. Wood, O. B. Leedy and F. W. Brandt and their places at the scoop and pick passenger engines have been filled by transfer of D. Shepler, J. R. Beaty V. E. Spear from the freight service. The three engineers named were among those reduced in rank several months ago.

ALL CARS MUST BE PERFECT.

Pennsy Serves Notice That it Will Not Handle Certain Cars.

The Pennsylvania railroad has notified other railroads that it will no longer accept from lines with which it connects, any passenger cars which do not meet the requirements of the federal safety appliance acts.

To meet the federal requirements for passenger cars, the Pennsylvania railroad has, since the details of the laws were made known in 1911, been adding to its cars the appliances demanded. All cars have now been equipped at a cost of $144,217.

To equip its locomotives and passenger and freight cars with the safety appliances required under the federal laws will, when completed—the company has until July 1st, 1916, to equip its freight cars—cost the Pennsylvania railroad system $5,185,000.

At the meeting of Friendship lodge, No 70, International Association of Machinists, Monday night, it was decided to send four delegates to the Indiana State Federation meeting in this city in September. The lodge is growing and it is estimated that about 65 per cent. of the eligible material in Fort Wayne has been enrolled.

SLIGHT WRECK AT HUGO.

A freight car in westbound local, No. 73, on the Wabash, left the tracks at Hugo this morning and got in such position as to block both tracks at that point. Passenger train No. 28, which appeared at the scene exactly on time, was compelled to wait an hour at Hugo. In the meantime an unusual number of passengers awaited its coming at the depot and were not backward in expressing their displeasure over the incident. The damage to the freight train was confined to the derailed car.

NEW EXECUTIVE BOARD.

E. M. Buchanan, J. O'Connell, M. G. Weidemann, E. C. Daniels, Daniel Long and W. O. Lakey compose the new executive board of the Building Trades council, which held a meeting last night. Mrs. Szink was in poor health at that time, but the journey resulted beneficially and she is now in a fair way to complete recovery.

PART OF ROUND HOUSE FALLS.

About one-third of the frame round house of the Lake Shore collapsed at noon yesterday. The structure was weakened about a week ago by the high winds and has been in a tottering condition since. The employes expected it to fall and none were caught when it collapsed. The building had accommodations for ten engines and had been in service ever since the road was built.

HIS LEFT HAND INJURED.

Machinist Hugh Collis, of the Pennsylvania erecting shop, will be unable to work for a few days. This morning an engine equalizer fell on his left hand, while he was at work, cutting and bruising the member badly. The company surgeon dressed the wound.

GIGANTIC WHEAT CROP SPELLS PROSPERITY FOR NATION.

THE HARVEST REGION.

Map of the wheat region, where scores of railroads, thousands of men, and millions in money are co-operating to harvest Uncle Sam's record crop. On the right, sacks of grain waiting at a siding for the cars, and (above) the congested tracks at a Lake Superior port, where millions of bushels of wheat are transferred from the trains to boats or elevators.

Uncle Sam right now is laying in for fair to the most colossal job of all his life.

He's wheeling in the wheat.

Nine hundred million bushels of it! Seven hundred million dollars' worth—the king of crops!

It will take 750,000 freight cars to move that crop to market—and those cars have got to be found at once, and filled with the grain that a horde of farmers in a dozen states are hauling to the rural shipping points.

That's the reason red-faced men in shirt sleeves along a hundred thousand miles of railroad, are sweating and swearing, and switching thousands of cars onto already overcrowded sidings. That's the reason high officials, of otherwise impeccable honesty, are ruthlessly "swiping" every last car of any old rival road they can victimize—if that car be only "fit for grain." Farmers, bankers, laborers, manufacturers, office clerks—the people of America—are co-operating feverishly to finish up the champion chore of our farming history.

Uncle Sam is not a city man. He's a farmer.

Some of the sons have set up factories in the towns, and now are prattling of their portentous import to prosperity. But Uncle Sam back on the farm only smiles. He knows what port prosperity hails from.

"Jest you cotton to th' crops, young man," he says, and ploughs a few more acres. And when it comes to the harvest, he calls on all America to help him—for the sake of their daily bread.

Just at present Uncle Sam is harvesting a pretty considerable crop of wheat—900,000,000 bushels of it, a world record. And every last bushel of it has got to be cared for—moved, marketed, milled, and made into meal. It's America's mightiest job!

An army of harvest hands have begun their laborious march northward over the golden grain fields, leaving behind them a prairie-wide swath of stubble, and innumerable stacks of grain.

They start in Oklahoma, move northward through Kansas and Nebraska, into Minnesota and the two Dakotas. Banks and manufacturers help them in the reaping, with money and machines.

But the brunt of the business bumps the railroads.

It's up to them to accomplish the actual physical movement of this year's whopping wheat crop. Kansas, Oklahoma, and Nebraska alone will have 253,000,000 bushels to be moved by rail. And no more than 1,200 bushels will go into one car. That means 210,000 cars, or at thirty cars to a train, 7,000 train loads of wheat to be moved in those three states in the next month! That in addition to the regular traffic!

The elevators and mills of Kansas City will absorb some 16 million bushels. Over 26 million bushels will go by rail to Chicago, and thence by boat to the east. Millions more of this great tide of wheat will stream down to Galveston and New Orleans, and east to Baltimore, for export.

Another mighty flood of the grain has its source in the three northern states, the Dakotas and Minnesota, which will produce several hundred million more bushels. Ninety millions of bushels will go to the Twin cities, 50 millions to Duluth. Transhipped to freighters at this and other Lake Superior ports, 110 million bushels will pass the "Soo" canal on the way to eastern mills. Other huge rivers of grain will flow across the border into Canada, and west through the Rockies to Seattle for export. Some will go all the way to New York by rail.

What wonder the railroads stagger, and the train dispatchers swear? There are'nt enough earwheels on the rails to move all that flood of grain as fast as the shippers demand.

For over a month the lines have been storing up cars, in preparation for the tremendous strain. Along the hundred thousand miles of track that tap the grain fields, a quarter of a million empty cars are being held on sidings, waiting for the wheat.

But that isn't enough. Every road striving deperately to augment its capacity, is stealing all the cars of rival lines that it can grab!

A car from an eastern railway comes west loaded with merchandise—and isn't returned. The road that holds it must pay the other road owning it 35 cents a day for the use of it—but what—is 35 cents per car, when you can get a fat $80 from the farmer for carrying grain in the same car?

"Hey, send back our car, will you, and get a hump on, too!" calls the eastern railroad.

"All right, certainly, old man," replies the western road. "We're homerouting your car right now. It's on the way."

And the "home route" chosen by the affable official in sending the borrowed car back east is—via Galveston with grain!

The railroads are going to receive about $50,000,000 in freight rates, for transporting the great wheat crop. They can't afford to let single carrier escape them, with the prospects of such profits.

The cars are the vital factors in America's greatest job.

LAKESIDE WANTS CONCRETE DIKES

Civic Improvement Body Has Interesting Special Meeting.

Plans for safeguarding Lakeside property from flood were discussed Monday night at a special meeting of the Lakeside and Forest Park Civic Improvement association and petitions to the board of public works asks that the present dike along Edgewater avenue be strengthened and that a concrete dike be constructed from the Columbia street bridge to Forrest Park avenue along St. Joe boulevard. The petitions were signed by about 100 members of the association and will be placed in circulation immediately for more signatures.

The petition was drafted by Attorney Homer C. Underwood and presented by him. Its provisions were discussed generally by William H. LaHourette, Chairman Frank Singrey, of the board of public works; Councilman Jacob Agne, Lew P. Sharp, William H. Leedy and others.

Mr. LaTourette said he did not believe that the petition should be signed until it was made certain that the rivers could not be dredged first. Henry F. Bullerman declared that Mr. LaTourette did not have the correct idea concerning the proposition, stating that at this time Lakeside has a chance to get the dikes, but no chance to have the rivers dredged. Another meeting of the association is to be held after the petitions have been in circulation a few days.

4-Year-Old Mascot Drives Own Car in Big Auto Parade

LITTLE KATHERINE HAGLUND 4-year-old, who, as mascot of the World's Fair Automobile parade, held recently in San Francisco, drove her own car. The parade consisted of 25,000 machines—the largest automobile parade on record—and the autos, four abreast, stretched out for a distance of several miles. California is second only to the state of New York in number of automobiles and is fast crawling up to first place because the climate permits of auto traffic the year round.

"ANTIS" ROUSED BY BRYAN.

Stand for Suffrage is Branded "a Tremendous Blunder."

Washington, July 21.—The "antis" are after the scalp of William Jennings Bryan as a result of his declaration in favor of suffrage.

Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, president of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, issued a statement tonight that Mr. Bryan has proved himself "a poor politician" and has failed to interpret correctly the sentiment in his home state.

The statement adds: "When Mr. Bryan goes to Nebraska to vote in favor of the woman suffrage amendment he will find that his attempt to make political capital out of this issue has been a tremendous blunder."

A revolt took place in suffrage circles here over the proposition to employ mere beauty instead of brains to obtain additional members for the congressional union. A meeting was held at the union headquarters last night, when teams were organized without reference to beauty and dominated by brains.

MANY WOES FOR POOR RICH CLASS

Children of Rich Parents Have Little Time for Companionship.

Chicago, July 20.—During the last Christmas holidays a professionel man was calling at the office of the president of one of the big corporations. During the call the door of the private office was opened without knocking and in stepped a boy of perhaps 18 years.

"Good morning, father," he said, glancing at the clock, which marked noon. The father smiled and nodded.

"I won't disturb you but a moment, sir. I find I had overlooked an engagement to lunch with the midday tango class, so I'll have to call off our little date."

The father expressed regret and presented his son to the visiting lawyer. The boy shook hands, chatted for a few moments with entire self-possession, and, on leaving, offered the lawyer a cigarette from his jeweled case.

"Jack has been home ten days now," said the fond father, "and it is an actual fact that I have only seen him twice and then by chance. He has had engagements for luncheon and dinner every day and has been out to a dance until 1 o'clock or later every morning. He's always out when I get home in the evening and sound asleep when I leave for the office in the morning. But"—and the man who rules a big corporation actually beamed at the consideration and kindness of his son—"he has given me his word that he will take luncheon with me once before he goes back to school."

That is by no means an extravagant illustration of a condition which is widespread so far as the children of well to do and rich people are concerned. Particularly during the shorter school vacations are these children caught in a whirl of constant excitement, which leaves them at the end in a state of both physical and mental exhaustion.

They visit all sorts of theaters apparently quite without regard to the kind of performance; they dance for six or eight hours out of each twenty four; they eat elaborate dinners and luncheons daily; at the most sensitive period in their whole lives they are subjected to the most nerve-racking strain possible. They acquire tastes and habits which make them utterly dissatisfied with any but extravagant and more or less sensational amusements.

In the effort to live up to the standards set by the richer children, those whose parents are not so well off are driven to spend more money than they should. They acquire a real distaste for simple and normal forms of amusement.

It has been suggested that after the Juvenile Protective league gets through righting the wrongs of the poor little poor child, it set to work to remedy the almost equally pathetic injustice by which the poor little child is handicapped.

AND IT WASN'T A "DIRGE."

Firemen Thought It Was Alarm, But It Was Only "Ragtime."

Firemen at No. 1 engine house jumped from their beds at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, donned boots, raincoats and hats almost with one movement and started to slide down the brass poles leading from the sleeping quarters to the wagons and engines, expecting to go out on a run in response to the alarm that all heard.

Not until some of the men had climbed to their places on the wagons did they realize that the "alarm" they had heard while asleep was only "canned music" of the ragtime variety, coming from an automatic piano placed in the building by a salesman. Fireman Jones dropped a nickel into the machine shortly before retiring and it failed to start the apparatus until 1 o'clock. The boys don't remember now whether it was "Malinda's Wedding Day," or "Here Comes My Daddy Now," because, filled with disgust, they all clambered back to bed and as they slipped off into the Land of Nod the piano was just finishing the last measures of the early morning serenade.

RUNAWAY GIRL CROSSES PACIFIC TO ESCAPE ATTENTIONS OF STEPFATHER.

MARY FRAZER.

San Francisco, Cal., July 21.—Telling a story of wrongs at the hands of her stepfather in Honolulu and of her flight to this city in the steerage of the seamship Sierra to escape his persecutions, 17-year-old Mary Frazer, held at the local detention home, is prepared to make a desperate fight against being returned to the islands.

The girl was arrested on the strength of a cablegram from the juvenile court at Honolulu. This was after she had succeeded in taking refuge at the home of her aunt in Oakland, Cal.

"I was working a Honolulu millinery store as apprentice when my brother, Manuel, who is living in Oakland, sent me money to 'come to him,' sobbed out the little run-away. "My brother John, who is only 21, came to Oakland three months ago and told Manuel how I was being abused. My other two brothers in Honolulu bought my ticket and saw me safely aboard the Sierra.

"Thirteen years ago my mother was divorced from my father and married my present stepfather, M. C. Martin, a carpenter. I hate may stepfather. He always wanted to kiss me, though he had nothing but harsh words for my mother. He used to tell me that he was just waiting until I became of age, when he would take possession of me."

Mary's own father, Jas. Frazer, lives in Honolulu. He has a large family, having married again, and, according to the girl, is unable to care for her with his other burdens.

SEEKS BOY CHAMPIONS.

Governor Ralston Would Appoint Indiana Lads Delegates.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 21.—Indiana boys who are champion corn growers in their respective counties will be appointed delegates to the annual convention of the National Topnotch Farmers' club to be held next year at San Francisco, under the auspices of the Panama-Pacific exposition, if Governor Ralston can learn their names. Last April the governor, on the request of the farmers' organization, asked through the county superintendents of the state, for the names of the three juvenile corn kings in each county in order to make his selection of delegates. To these letters only nineteen county superintendents have responded.

It is desired that in counties where there is a boys' corn club the president of the club and the two boys under 21 years old holding the record for the largest acreage yield of corn should be named. In counties where no boys' corn club exists the county superintendent was requested to name three farmer boys under 21 years old to act as delegates.

Jack Johnson is Done; Public is Sick of Him, Declares Fullerton

Sport Expert Tells of Damage Big Negro Has Done to Boxing, and of Scandal Which Has Enveloped Every Match He Ever Made.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton.)

Jack Johnson is done.

The passing of the big negro who has dominated the boxing world for years is as complete as if he had been knocked out—even more so. The public never again will stand for him, and the promoter who would attempt to stage a battle between Johnson and anyone else would be foolish.

The accusations that are being hurled at him by Frank Moran and his manager have opened the eyes of the public all over the world to the tactics Johnson has pursued. Further it has hurt the boxing game, which the big cotton field negro has disgraced for years.

Johnson's career has been one long continued scandal and the latest merely accents his lack of character.

The fact that Moran and his manager confess that they signed an agreement to lay down to the negro and then tried to beat him puts them in a category slightly below his.

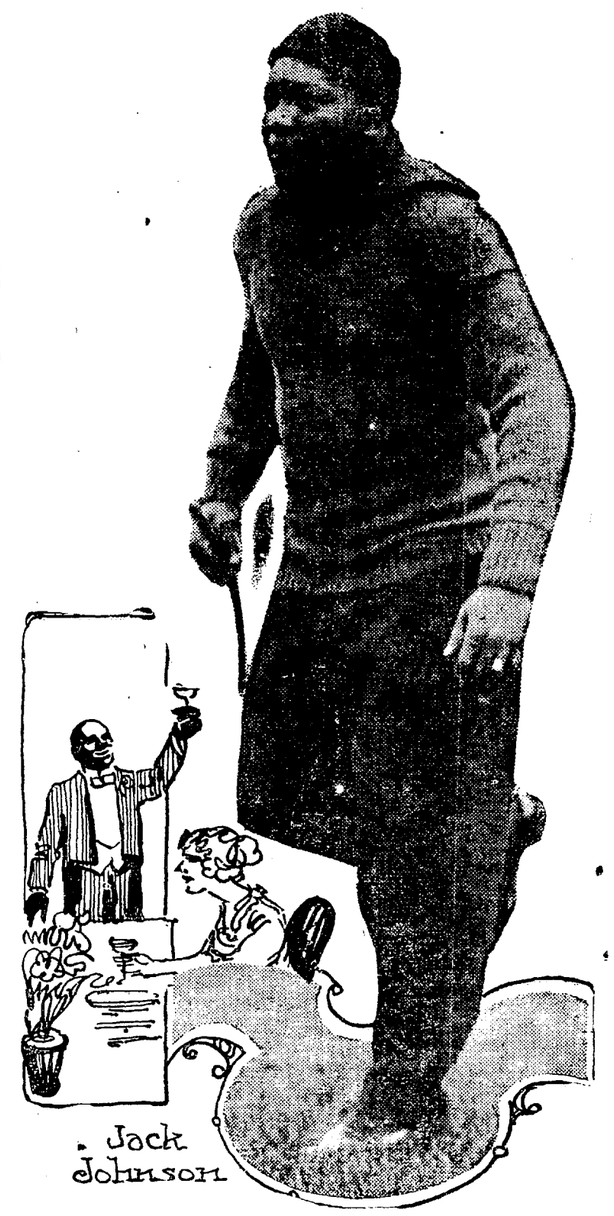

Study Johnson. He was a great fighter. He was starved and ill treated around Chicago during the boxing days, because the white fighters were afraid of him. In those days the big negro was quiet, courteous and seemingly honest.

He came with his hat off to ask favors, was ready to fight anyone for any part of the purse, and the managers and fighters refused him the chance. Sometimes he was hungry, and often desperate. He probably could have whipped any heavyweight in the world, and was falling before second raters who had food sufficient for proper nourishment. I felt sorry for him. Several times I begged managers to give him a chance merely out of fair play.

He went to Australia and returned a champion. A perfect, physical animal, he came back in full manhood—and well fed. He came to see me with his hat off, smiling, glad to be home and evidently grateful for past favors. Then a swarm of sharpers, crooks and leeches swarmed upon him; white men worse than he was, catering to his vanity, his pride and his passions—because he was getting big money. Naturally the cotton field negro "swelled." He commenced to show arrogance. He became detestable in his attitude toward whites, and from those who associated with him it was small wonder.

His fighting career has been marked with black. He "framed" at least two fights on the coast before he became champion, and he was mixed in other shady deals.

Johnson wanted the championship. He felt practically certain he would whip Jeffries. The story of that fight at Reno never has been told. It is practically certain that there existed an agreement that Johnson was lay down to Jeffries. It is certain that such an agreement was understood between certain parties connected with the fighters. Another thing: It is almost certain that the program would have been carried out but for Billy Delaney. Delaney had made Jeffries. He had quarreled with Jeffries over his marriage and the old partnership was broken off, and hatred followed. Delaney was out for revenge. He went behind the negro. Two days before the date of the fight it became a certainty that Johnson was not going to lay down. Delaney told me he would not let Johnson quit and that rather than allow him to quit he would handle the case himself.

You remember that at that time Jeffries suddenly became morose, went away into the mountains and sulked. He must have known that if they fought seriously and Johnson tried he would be whipped. Johnson tried. Many think he double crossed the Jeffries crowd.

Twice since then Johnson has been mixed in miserable fakes in the ring. He faked with Jim Johnson in Paris. Now he tries to "fix" a fight with a second-rater like Moran, who tries to double cross him.

Isn't it wonderful what the boxing public will stand for? But this final blow is the limit. If they ever let Johnson fight again it will be in the hope that Sam Langford beats him, as he deserves. Nor is it any cinch they won't try to fix that. Truly, it is a lovely game.

WORLD INDUSTRIES ARE COMING HERE

Cheapness of Production Bring European Firms Across.

New York, July 21.—More than fifty of the leading lace and embroidery manufacturers of Germany, France and England have opened branch factories in this country in the last eight months. The latest plant to be built is one in Hoboken, N. J., costing $250,000.

Trade papers in the dry goods field are devoting much comment to the foreign invasion. It is said that this country will lead the world within the next year in the production of embroideries and laces and that the United States already stands next to Switzerland.

The influx of foreign manufacturers was brought about by the success which has been attained by Americans in the production of laces and embroideries by improved machinery. They not only lessen the cost of production, but actually are able to turn out finer products in many instances than the hand work of foreign lace makers.

Laces that cost $1 a yard to produce abroad can be duplicated by machinery for thirty cents a yard, enabling American manufacturers to undersell all others and gradually giving them a hold on the export trade.

It was once thought that the best laces in the world came from Switzerland, but sentiment in this respect has changed during the last few years. Germany and France are now among the heaviest consumers of American laces.

As the American manufacturers began to dominate the market there was only one course left to the foreign manufacturers and that was to establish branches in this country, where they could obtain the machinery and thus meet the American manufacturers on a common footing.

Some of the leading European lace manufacturers have closed their home plants, it is said, and are transferring all their business to this country. They are bringing their employes with them and teaching them how to operate modern American lace-making machinery. It is estimated that fully 3,000 persons have been brought to this country in the last two years to work in the lace mills, one-half of the number coming from Switzerland.

ONCE CONDEMNED MAY NOW GO FREE

Once Said to Have Made an Open Confession of Murder.

Trenton, N. J., July 21.—John Edward Schuyler, who sat in the death chamber of Hunterdon county jail at Flemington one June day seven years ago and heard the ominous pounding of hammers that was shaping his gallows in the yard outside, stands a chance today of walking out of his prison cage vindicated.

Frank Burd, scarcely 23 years old, who began a life of crime with a jail sentence when he was only 7 years old, and who has passed the greater part of the sixteen years intervening behind prison bars, is said to have confessed to the murder of Manning Riley at Califon, N. J., the night of January 19, 1907, a crime for which Schuyler was convicted, sentenced to be hanged and later sent to prison here for life.

While Hunterdon county is reviewing the story of the slaying of Manning Riley, Miss Eleanor R. Gebhardt, lawyer, daughter of William C. Gebhardt, supreme court clerk, is taking steps to bring Schuyler's case before the board of pardons.

The people of Hunterdon county never were so excited over a crime as they were when Riley's body was found along upper Parker road. Riley, a young farmer, was extremely popular in the community.

Schuyler, who lived at Venoy, a nearby town, was arrested the following day, accused of the crime. It was believed in Hunterdon at that time that George Knowles Large, district attorney, had a good chain of circumstantial evidence against Schuyler.

The prosecution tried to show that Schuyler held a grudge against Riley as a result of a whipping he received at Riley's hand. The jury convicted him after five hours' deliberation. After being sentenced to death Schuyler appealed to the board of pardons, and while the board was hearing his case Governor Stokes granted a reprieve to him.

WOULD ENLARGE INCOME PENALTY

Commissioner Osborne Wants Right to Question Anyone.

Washington, July 21.—Worried over the light returns from the income tax, Internal Revenue Commissioner Osborne has appealed to congress for legislation increasing his inquisitorial powers, giving him the right to quiz any one he suspects of false returns, and enlarging the penalties for tax-dodging and frauds.

The commissioner prepared and sent up to congress his own draft of an amendment to the income tax law, with this statement:

"Greater authority should be given the [illegible] to make required returns and reports, and the proposed amendment would effect this."

The amendment proposed reads:

"All corporations, joint stock companies or associations and insurance companies shall, upon request of the commissioner of internal revenue, furnish information as to the names of persons owning shares of stock, common or preferred, or both, in such companies or organizations, the amount of dividend paid to each of such stockholders for any given period, and such other information as may be necessary or desirable in connection with the administration of the income tax law.

"Every company or association as above described, and every individual subject to the income tax, shall also permit free access to all books, papers, records and securities of every kind, whether for itself, himself or for another, by any revenue agent or inspector employed for the purpose of investigating income tax returns or in ascertaining whether such returns should have been made where no returns were filed, and it shall be lawful for the [illegible] ered to have made false and fraudulent returns, or any other persons having possession, care or custody of books of account containing entries relating to the business of such persons or any other person as he may deep proper, to appear before him and produce such books at a time and place named, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories under oath respecting the income of himself or another person."

Penalties under this proposed amendment are fines amounting to $10,000.

ATKINS SHUTS OUT TERRIERS

Fort Wayne Makes it Three Straight With Terre Haute.

Tommy Atkins, the star southpaw twirler for Fort Wayne, shut out the Terre Haute team Monday, making it the third straight victory for the fifth raters in the race for the Central league pennant. Inability to connect with the offerings of Atkins with men on bases tells the real cost of the game for Terre Haute. Cantwell, the opposing pitcher, twirled a fine game that entitled him to win, but his usual hard luck played against him.

The contest was marked by several sensational fielding features but the real big act was staged by Bratchi, who drove the ball over the center field fence in the fourth inning. It was a duplicate of the swat in Sunday's game with one down and no one on. The other Fort Wayne run was made in the second when with Brant discarded. Streeter drove a hit to left for three sacks. Martin hit a grounder which glanced off Anderson's ankle and was good for two bases, scoring Streeter from third.

Two men were on for Fort Wayne in the seventh with but one down. Quinlan booted Brant's drive and Street singled and Martin moved both runners one base on a bunt. Davis, Terre Haute's left fielder, made a sensational catch in this inning when he ran far back of the foul line and pulled down a long drive by Nespo, retiring the side.

In only one inning did it seem possible that the Terriers might score a run and that was in the ninth when Vann worked Atkins for a base on balls and Spair singled. However, the chance was lost when Davis forced Vann, Anderson fanned and Bratchi's catch of Quinlan's fly retired the side. The score:

NO STRIKE IN MAJOR LEAGUES

Settlement in Kraft Case Averts Possible Big Baseball War.

New York, July 21.—There will be no strike of baseball players in the two major leagues. The Kraft case, basis for a strike order issued yesterday by the Baseball Players' fraternity, was settled today by the Newark International agreeing to buy Nashville's interest in Kraft.

Announcement to this effect was made this afternoon by Charles H. Ebbetts, owner of the Brooklyn Nationals, and a large stockholder in the Newark International league team.

At the time of Mr. Ebbett's announcement the American league magnates were in session, having been called together by President Johnson to determine upon a course of action in case the players should obey the strike order. Mr. Ebbetts announced that Nashville had signified his acceptance of Newark's proposal and that Kraft would report to the Newark team at Providence tomorrow. Kraft has been under suspension for more than five weeks, ever since his refusal to report to the Nashville club. In settlement of all claims on Kraft the Nashville club is to receive $2,500, Mr. Ebbetts announced.

"I made this arrangement without either request or instruction from either the American or the National league," Mr. Ebbetts said, "I acted entirely upon my own responsibility. I have not been in communication with David Fultz. Doubtless, however, he as well as everybody else, will be pleased with this settlement of the situation."

Mr. Ebbetts was asked if the National league had "backed down."

"No," he replied. "If anybody has backed down, I have."

AMERICAN IN SESSION.

Club Owners Were Preparing to Deal With Satuation.

New York, July 21.—The threatened strike of the members of the baseball players' fraternity growing out of the demands of Player Clarence O. Kraft, who recently was suspended by the national committee for refusing to report to the Nashville club of the Southern association from the Newark International league club at a reduction in salary, was the principal subject for discussion today by club owners of the American league, called together here by President Ban Johnson.

The action of President Johnson in calling a meeting of his club owners was explained as a preventative measure. Mr. Johnson said that his league had no interest in the legal aspect of the Kraft case, as it involved the National league.

While American league owners were preparing to prevent the threatened strike if possible, officials of the National league and President Fultz, of the players' fraternity, were optimistic that a settlement of the question might be reached. It was possible that some major league club might claim the services of Kraft and thereby take over whatever claims the Nashville club of the Southern association or the Newark Internationals might have to him. President Fultz in a statement today said that the players were willing to arbitrate the question and had expected that such a course be followed, but the request was not answered by the ational commission. This statement was taken to mean that Fultz would again request that arbitration be resorted to rather than follow up the ultimatum sent by him to the ational commission yesterday, and plunge organized baseball into a strike that would result in heavy losses in salaries and the probable closing of parks throughout the two big league circuits.

Speculation as to the number of players who would stand behind the fraternity in the event a strike is called, occupied the attention today of followers of the national game. It was not believed that members of the New York Giants would join in the movement and men close to the more prominent of the Brooklyn players thought it highly improbable that they would take chances of court action and loss of salary to uphold the fraternity. Manager Frank Chance, of the New York Americans, declared last night that eight out of ten of his players would continue to play.

Reports from other teams in the two big leagues were to the effect that a difference of opinion existed among the players who are members of the fraternity on the advisability of following a strike order. The Philadelphia Athletics appear to be opposed to a strike and if one is called to stand by their manager as opposed to the fraternity. The Philadelphia Nationals, on the other hand, seemed to favor standing by the fraternity, as did the Boston National team.

The Chicago Cubs, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Cleveland and Cincinnati clubs appeared to be about evenly divided over the question, while the Detroit Tigers appeared to favor a strike.

Enough players would go on strike, it was asserted here today, to cripple the majority of the teams of the two leagues, and this coupled with the declaration of President Johnson, of the American league, that he would order all parks in that organization closed if the strike order is issued tomorrow, presented a rather gloomy outlook for owners, players and fans.

NOTHING BUT SPEED GOES WHEN CHAS. TRASK IS ON THE COURTS

Whenever the official starter in the Northern Indiana tennis tournament, now on at the Country club courts, announces that Charles Trask, of Indianapolis, is due for a match, there is usually a grand rush toward his particular court and the spectators line up confident of seeing some exceptional work. Trask is showing more speed this season than ever before and in speaking of serves, it is nothing but a white streak and a puff of dust when the ball leaves his racquet. The Indianapolis racquet expert was also the feature of the northern Indiana tournament a year ago, but he is playing in much better form now than he did at that time, according to those who have kept their eyes on the young man.

NEVER AGAIN FOR ME, SAYS LOBERT

Can Cow Horse Beat Crack Base Runner? Well, It Did, Anyhow.

How Hans Lobert, of the Phillies, raced a cow horse around the bases out in California is told in the August Baseball Magazine. It seems that when the world tour baseball party played in Oxnard, Cal., a unique match between cow horse and ball player was staged. Here's what took place:

The feat is remarkable because it is the only one of its kind that has ever taken place. It was performed by John B. ("Honus") Lobert between the eighth and ninth innings of the game. The question arose as to whether a cattle horse, trained to rapid turns, could beat a base runner around the diamond, and immediately it was proposed to test the matter. The fastest cattle horse in Ventura county happened to be owned in Oxnard and against this wonderful animal, which had a record of 24 seconds to the quarter mile, Lobert (the fastest base runner living) agreed to race around the diamond. Interest in the event was intense, as a large portion of the residents of Oxnard are cattle men. An enormous crowd filled the stands (the game was a close contest, the score 2 to 1 at the beginning of the ninth inning) and, despite their great desire to witness the end of the baseball contest, the specators were completely absorbed in the remarkable race between man and horse. Lobert, smiling and confident, advanced to the plate. The horse was ridden by a Mexican vaquero. After discussing their line of progress, Lobert and the rider moved to the scratch. Klem gave the word "go" and both horse and man were off in a flash. Lobert got into his stride quicker than the horse, rounding first well in the lead. At second he was still a yard ahead and lengthened his lead on the turn to about twenty-five feet. When the spectators saw this great athlete actually leading the flying horse to third base, they rose en masse and their cheers could be heard for miles. It was a thrilling moment and one never to be forgotten. "Honus" reached third first, but only by a shade. Wheeling like a thunderbolt, the horse forced to his utmost, came abreast of Lobert and flashed past him about two yards from the plate, winner by half a length, in 14 seconds (Lobert's record time for the distance). Some watcher caught the time of the horse at 13 seconds—but Lobert said he was certain he did not run the distance faster than his record and as the horse only beat him by about half a length it is safe to say 14 seconds is the correct time for the race. The cowboys present were elated at the victory of the horse, but at the same time were generous in their shouts of applause to Lobert, whose wonderful effort will be remembered as one of the historical events of Ventura county. John said it was a ticklish sensation to hear a horse thundering at your heels; and at second base he turned his head to see if the horse was dangerously near, this threw him slightly out of his stride and probably, had it not done so, he would have won the race. However, he says he will never try it again as it is too risky a proposition for a man whose profession is baseball. There would be small profit in sustaining an injury which might easily occur in such an event.

RULING BLOW TO ORGANIZED BALL

Buffalo Judge Vacates Injunction Secured in Chase Case.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 21.—Organized ball suffered a legal defeat today when Justice Herbert P. Bissell granted the motion to vacate the injunction secured by the Chicago American league baseball club restraining Hal Chase from playing with the Buffalo Federal league club.

The lack of mutual obligation in the so-called ten days' clause of the contract under which Chase was playing with the Chicago team whereby the club could terminate the contract on ten days' notice while the player was bound under several provisions of the "national agreement" formed the basis of the decision vacating the injunction.

That organized baseball is a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law was denied by Justice Bissell on the ground that he cannot agree that "the business of baseball for profit is interstate trade of commerce and therefore subject to the provisions of the Sherman act."

The court held, however, that it was monopoly of the baseball business in contravention of the common law. Chase was served with injunction papers June 25 while he was playing with the Buffalo team at Federal park. He has been on the bench since. In his affidavit upon which the motion to vacate the injunction was based, Chase alleged that he gave the Chicago club ten days' notice of his intention to leave, at the expiration of which time he signed the Buffalo contract.

Regarding the ten day clause, Justice Bissell in holding that the injunction was unenforceable, said: "The plaintiff can terminate the contract at any time on ten days' notice. The defendant is bound to many obligations under the remarkable provisions of the national agreement. The players' contract executed in accordance with its terms, binds him not only for the playing season of six months from Apr. 14 to October 14, but also for another season, if the plaintiff chooses to exercise its option, and if it insists upon the requirement of an option clause in each succeeding contract, the defendant can be held for a term of years. His only alternative is to abandon his vocation. Can it fairly be claimed that there is mutuality in such a contract? The absolute lack of mutuality, both of obligation and of remedy, in this contract would prevent a court of equity from making it the basis of equitable relief by injunction or otherwise. The negative covenant under such circumstances is without a consideration to support it and is unenforceable by injunction."

Justice Bissell declared organized baseball as complete a monopoly of the baseball business for profit as any monopoly can be made. "It is in contravention of common law," he said, "in that it invades the right to contract as a property right, and in that it is a combination to restrain and control the exercise of a profession or calling."

The injunction was vacated with $10 costs to the defendant.

FITZ GREATEST OF ALL BOXERS

Old Boxing Instructor Says Johnson is not Aggressive Fighter.

Chicago, July 21.—Bob Fitzsimmons and not Jack Johnson is the greatest of all boxers, is the belief of George Dawson, veteran boxing instructor of the Chicago Athletic association and onetime lightweight champion of Australia.

"I never have shared the hysteria over Johnson's greatness," remarked Dawson after one of his pupils had said the negro champion outclassed other men who held the title. "Do not make the mistake that I underrate him, however, for he has brought some money to me. I was one of the few who believed Jeffries did not have a chance with the negro and I won plenty of wagers on the outcome. I did not bet on the Moran-Johnson contest, for, although I was quite certain Johnson had gone back. I had no idea what sort of a boxer Moran was.

"The first time I ever saw Johnson in action was in California in 1902. I was training Fitzsimmons at the time for his second bout with Jeffries, and we were short a good sparring partner. Johnson was matched to box twenty rounds with Hank Griffin, a big negro trial horse, and I suggested to Bob that we engage the winner of this contest. Bob consented and I went to watch the two colored men box.

"Johnson at that time was almost, if not quite, as good as he ever was in his career. He had youth and vigor, and in those days there was more than one good white man who was giving him as wide a berth as champions did a few years later. The Johnson-Griffin contest ended in a draw, but Griffin looked to me as far the superior man and I engaged him to work with Bob.

"Now Bob was on the decline at that time. He was an old man when he got his first chance at the championship and three years before this time had been knocked out by Jeffriies. But Griffith, although I considered him Johnson's superior and other judges considered him at least his equal, was the veriest playing in old Bob's hands. Fitz used to maul him around, outbox him and outslug him at his own pleasure. While Johnson may have improved considerably after this, I never could conceive of him improving to an extent to put him on a plane with Fitzsimmons.

"Of course Johnson was a wonderful defensive boxer and probably always will be. But I don't consider a man a great fighter just because he can keep from getting beaten. That's the reason I never thought Jim Jeffries a wonder. He never was an aggressive fighter, and most of his battles were won by letting the other fellow wear himself out fighting him. It is the same with Johnson. In none of the fights in which I have seen him has Johnson been aggressive. I doubt if he ever had an equal on the defence, but that is only half of the game. Fitzsimmons was especially good on the defence and offence.

"If Johnson was the greatest fighter in the world he never has shown any marked ability in disposing of his opponents. He was about at the zenith of his career when he won the championship from Tommy Burns, while Tommy Burns probably was one of the weakest men who ever held the title. Yet Johnson couldn't knock Burns out; he scored a technical knockout to his credit merely because the Australian police did not want to let Burns receive any more punishment.

"Two years later Johnson took on the shell of Jeffries, a man whom even a fair second rater of the present day probably could have beaten. But Jeffries stayed fifteen rounds with Jack before he was put away. (I have heard it argued that Johnson was merely playing with Jeff in the bout and could have finished it in half the time had he chosen to do so. But I fail to see any ground for such belief. Johnson is inordinately egotistical, and I think if he could have beaten Jim with one punch he would have done so. There was no possible financial reason for his letting Jeff stay, either, for Johnson had already disposed of his interest in the moving pictures and could not have cared much whether or not they were a success or a failure."

Quick Suggests a Baseball Reform

(By Herbert Quick.)

I now wish to take a moment or two for the reform of baseball.

Every season starts off well, and three times out of four is spoiled in midsummer by the fact that some team has run away with the pennant. Down in the cellar, too, will be found almost any season, some two or three teams which are making no fight except to keep out of last place.

The cause of this is perfectly obvious, and its cure is equally plain. Men like Mack and McGraw not only have the best men, but their power is so great that they reach out into the minors and snap up every good youngster who shows big league form.

There is a scriptural text which reads, "To him that hath shall be given, and to him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath," but so long as Providence attends to the application of this principle, there would seem to be no call for league rules and regulations to be framed for the increase of the advantage of him who hath over him who hath not.

The rules should be changed so that the weakest club in the superior league would have first choice among the stars of the inferiors. I leave the details to Mr. Fullerton; but I insist that something of the sort should be done.

No minor star should be purchasable by any big league team until all the club below .500 in the table of "standing of the clubs" have waived on him.

All drafts should be made by the league and the men drafted should go into a jackpot—to be opened the tail enders. After the tailenders have exercised first choice and thus perhaps picked up a Walter Johnson, a Frank Baker, a Tyrus Cobb or a Hans Wagner the team next above should be given second choice.

The power of one great player to even things up is illustrated by the effect of Johnson's acquisition by Washington. It was far better for the league and for baseball for him to go to a weak team. It would have been a bad thing if Mack had acquired him.

Give the weak teams the strong recruits as a matter of right, and we shall soon see those hard gruelling finishes in all the leagues which as a fan I for one delight in—and all fans are alike in this.

Then we shall not have the July slump in half the towns. The interest will grow until the last game is played, for every league will give us a horse race finish.

ATKINS SHUTS OUT TERRIERS

Fort Wayne Makes it Three Straight With Terre Haute.

Tommy Atkins, the star southpaw twirler for Fort Wayne, shut out the Terre Haute team Monday, making it the third straight victory for the fifth raters in the race for the Central league pennant. Inability to connect with the offerings of Atkins with men on bases tells the real cost of the game for Terre Haute. Cantwell, the opposing pitcher, twirled a fine game that entitled him to win, but his usual hard luck played against him.

The contest was marked by several sensational fielding features but the real big act was staged by Bratchi, who drove the ball over the center field fence in the fourth inning. It was a duplicate of the swat in Sunday's game with one down and no one on. The other Fort Wayne run was made in the second when with Brant discarded, Streeter drove a hit to left for three sacks. Martin hit a grounder which glanced off Anderson's ankle and was good for two bases, scoring Streeter from third.

Two men were on for Fort Wayne in the seventh with but one down. Quinlan booted Brant's drive and Street singled and Martin moved both runners one base on a bunt. Davis, Terre Haute's left fielder, made a sensational catch in this inning when he ran far back of the foul line and pulled down a long drive by Nespo, retiring the side.

In only one inning did it seem possible that the Terriers might score a run and that was in the ninth when Vann worked Atkins for a base on balls and Spair singled. However, the chance was lost when Davis forced Vann, Anderson fanned and Bratchi's catch of Quinlan's fly retired the side. The score:

NO STRIKE IN MAJOR LEAGUES

Settlement in Kraft Case Averts Possible Big Baseball War.

New York, July 21.—There will be no strike of baseball players in the two major leagues. The Kraft case, basis for a strike order issued yesterday by the Baseball Players' fraternity, was settled today by the Newark International agreeing to buy Nashville's interest in Kraft.

Announcement to this effect was made this afternoon by Charles H. Ebbetts, owner of the Brooklyn Nationals, and a large stockholder in the Newark International league team.

At the time of Mr. Ebbett's announcement the American league magnates were in session, having been called together by President Johnson to determine upon a course of action in case the players should obey the strike order. Mr. Ebbetts announced that Nashville had signified his acceptance of Newark's proposal and that Kraft would report to the Newark team at Providence tomorrow. Kraft has been under suspension for more than five weeks, ever since his refusal to report to the Nashville club. In settlement of all claims on Kraft the Nashville club is to receive $2,500, Mr. Ebbetts announced.

"I made this arrangement without either request or instruction from either the American or the National league," Mr. Ebbetts said. "I acted entirely upon my own responsibility. I have not been in communication with David Fultz. Doubtless, however, he as well as everybody else, will be pleased with this settlement of the situation."

Mr. Ebbetts was asked if the National league had "backed down."

"No," he replied. "If anybody has backed down, I have."

Club Owners Were Preparing to Deal With Satuation.

New York, July 21.—The threatened strike of the members of the baseball players' fraternity growing out of the demands of Player Clarence O. Kraft, who recently was suspended by the national committee for refusing to report to the Nashville club of the Southern association from the Newark International league club at a reduction in salary, was the principal subject for discussion today by club owners of the American league, called together here by President Ban Johnson.

The action of President Johnson in calling a meeting of his club owners was explained as a preventative measure. Mr. Johnson said that his league had no interest in the legal aspect of the Kraft case, as it involved the National league.

While American league owners were preparing to prevent the threatened strike if possible, officials of the National league and President Fultz, of the players' fraternity, were optimistic that a settlement of the question might be reached. It was possible that some major league club might claim the services of Kraft and thereby take over whatever claims the Nashville club of the Southern association or the Newark Internationals might have to him. President Fultz in a statement today said that the players were willing to arbitrate the question and had expected that such a course be followed, but the request was not answered by the national commission. This statement was taken to mean that Fultz would again request that arbitration be resorted to rather than follow up the ultimatum sent by him to the national commission yesterday, and plunge organized baseball into a strike that would result in heavy losses in salaries and the probable closing of parks throughout the two big league circuits.

Speculation as to the number of players who would stand behind the fraternity in the event a strike is called, occupied the attention today of followers of the national game. It was not believed that members of the New York Giants would join in the movement and men close to the more prominent of the Brooklyn players thought it highly improbable that they would take chances of court action and loss of salary to uphold the fraternity. Manager Frank Chance, of the New York Americans, declared last night that eight out of ten of his players would continue to play.

Reports from other teams in the two big leagues were to the effect that a difference of opinion existed among the players who are members of the fraternity on the advisability of following a strike order. The Philadelphia Athletics appear to be opposed to a strike and if one is called to stand by their manager as opposed to the fraternity. The Philadelphia Nationals, on the other hand, seemed to favor standing by the fraternity, as did the Boston National team.

The Chicago Cubs, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Cleveland and Cincinnati clubs appeared to be about evenly divided over the question, while the Detroit Tigers appeared to favor a strike.

Enough players would go on strike, it was asserted here today, to cripple the majority of the teams of the two leagues, and this coupled with the declaration of President Johnson, of the American league, that he would order all parks in that organization closed if the strike order is issued tomorrow, presented a rather gloomy outlook for owners, players and fans.

NOTHING BUT SPEED GOES WHEN CHAS. TRASK IS ON THE COURTS

Whenever the official starter in the Northern Indiana tennis tournament, now on at the Country club courts, announces that Charles Trask, of Indianapolis, is due for a match, there is usually a grand rush toward his particular court and the spectators line up confident of seeing some exceptional work. Trask is showing more speed this season than ever before and in speaking of serves, it is nothing but a white streak and a puff of dust when the ball leaves his racquet. The Indianapolis racquet expert was also the feature of the northern Indiana tournament a year ago, but he is playing in much better form now than he did at that time, according to those who have kept their eyes on the young man.

NEVER AGAIN FOR ME, SAYS LOBERT

Can Cow Horse Beat Crack Base Runner? Well, It Did, Anyhow.

How Hans Lobert, of the Phillies, raced a cow horse around the bases out in California is told in the August Baseball Magazine. It seems that when the world tour baseball party played in Oxnard, Cal., a unique match between cow horse and ball player was staged. Here's what took place:

The feat is remarkable because it is the only one of its kind that has ever taken place. It was performed by John B. ("Honus") Lobert between the eighth and ninth innings of the game. The question arose as to whether a cattle horse, trained to rapid turns, could beat a base runner around the diamond, and immediately it was proposed to test the matter. The fastest cattle horse in Ventura county happened to be owned in Oxnard and against this wonderful animal, which had a record of 24 seconds to the quarter mile, Lobert (the fastest base runner living) agreed to race around the diamond. Interest in the event was intense, as a large portion of the residents of Oxnard are cattle men. An enormous crowd filled the stands (the game was a close contest, the score 2 to 1 at the beginning of the ninth inning) and, despite their great desire to witness the end of the baseball contest, the specators were completely absorbed in the remarkable race between man and horse. Lobert, smiling and confident, advanced to the plate. The horse was ridden by a Mexican vaquero. After discussing their line of progress, Lobert and the rider moved to the scratch. Klem gave the word "go" and both horse and man were off in a flash. Lobert got into his stride quicker than the horse rounding first well in the lead. At second he was still a yard ahead and lengthened his lead on the turn to about twenty-five feet. When the spectators saw this great athlete actually leading the flying horse to third base, they rose en masse and their cheers could be heard for miles. It was a thrilling moment and one never to be forgotten. "Honus" reached third first, but only by a shade. Wheeling like a thunderbolt, the horse forced to his utmost, came abreast of Lobert and flashed past him about two yards from the plate, winner by half a length, in 14 seconds (Lobert's record time for the distance). Some watcher caught the time of the horse at 13 seconds—but Lobert said he was certain he did not run the distance faster than his record and as the horse only beat him by about half a length it is safe to say 14 seconds is the correct time for the race. The cowboys present were elated at the victory of the horse, but at the same time were generous in their shouts of applause to Lobert, whose wonderful effort will be remembered as one of the historical events of Ventura county. John said it was a ticklish sensation to hear a horse thundering at your heels; and at second base he turned his head to see if the horse was dangerously near, this threw him slightly out of his stride and probably, had it not done so, he would have won the race. However, he says he will never try it again as it is too risky a proposition for a man whose profession is baseball. There would be small profit in sustaining an injury which might easily occur in such an event.

RULING BLOW TO ORGANIZED BALL

Buffalo Judge Vacates Injunction Secured in Chase Case.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 21.—Organized ball suffered a legal defeat today when Justice Herbert P. Bissell granted the motion to vacate the injunction secured by the Chicago American league baseball club restraining Hal Chase from playing with the Buffalo Federal league club.

The lack of mutual obligation in the so-called ten days' clause of the contract under which Chase was playing with the Chicago team whereby the club could terminate the contract on ten days' notice while the player was bound under several provisions of the "national agreement" formed the basis of the decision vacating the injunction.

That organized baseball is a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law was denied by Justice Bissell on the ground that he cannot agree that "the business of baseball for profit is interstate trade of commerce and therefore subject to the provisions of the Sherman act."

The court held, however, that it was monopoly of the baseball business in contravention of the common law. Chase was served with injunction papers June 25 while he was playing with the Buffalo team at Federal park. He has been on the bench since. In his affidavit upon which the motion to vacate the injunction was based, Chase alleged that he gave the Chicago club ten days' notice of his intention to leave, at the expiration of which time he signed the Buffalo contract.

Regarding the ten day clause, Justice Bissell in holding that the injunction was unenforceable, said: "The plaintiff can terminate the contract at any time on ten days' notice. The defendant is bound to many obligations under the remarkable provisions of the national agreement. The players' contract executed in accordance with its terms, binds him not only for the playing season of six months from Apr. 14 to October 14, but also for another season, if the plaintiff chooses to exercise its option, and if it insists upon the requirement of an option clause in each succeeding contract, the defendant can be held for a term of years. His only alternative is to abandon his vocation. Can it fairly be claimed that there is mutuality in such a contract? The absolute lack of mutuality, both of obligation and of remedy, in this contract would prevent a court of equity from making it the basis of equitable relief by injunction or otherwise. The negative covenant under such circumstances is without a consideration to support it and is unenforceable by injunction."

Justice Bissell declared organized baseball as complete a monopoly of the baseball business for profit as any monopoly can be made. "It is in contravention of common law," he said, "in that it invades the right to contract as a property right, and in that it is a combination to restrain and control the exercise of a profession or calling."

The injunction was vacated with $10 costs to the defendant.

CANADIAN FAILS TO CAPTURE CANOE TITLE FROM BRITTON.

Ralph Britton, the Canadian canoeist, has just failed in his effort to wrest the championship from Lee Friede, of Boston, the United States' best wielder of the paddle. The same men met a year ago in the contest for the international title.

FITZ GREATEST OF ALL BOXERS

Old Boxing Instructor Says Johnson is not Aggressive Fighter.

Chicago, July 21.—Bob Fitzsimmons and not Jack Johnson is the greatest of all boxers, is the belief of George Dawson, veteran boxing instructor of the Chicago Athletic association and onetime lightweight champion of Australia.

"I never have shared the hysteria over Johnson's greatness," remarked Dawson after one of his pupils had said the negro champion outclassed other men who held the title. "Do not make the mistake that I underrate him, however, for he has brought some money to me. I was one of the few who believed Jeffries did not have a chance with the negro and I won plenty of wagers on the outcome. I did not bet on the Moran-Johnson contest, for, although I was quite certain Johnson had gone back, I had no idea what sort of a boxer Moran was.

"The first time I ever saw Johnson in action was in California in 1902. I was training Fitzsimmons at the time for his second bout with Jeffries, and we were short a good sparring partner. Johnson was matched to box twenty rounds with Hank Griffin, a big negro trial horse, and I suggested to Bob that we engage the winner of this contest. Bob consented and I went to watch the two colored men box.

"Johnson at that time was almost, if not quite, as good as he ever was in his career. He had youth and vigor, and in those days there was more than one good white man who was giving him as wide a berth as champions did a few years later. The Johnson-Griffin contest ended in a draw, but Griffin looked to me as far the superior man and I engaged him to work with Bob.

"Now Bob was on the decline at that time. He was an old man when he got his first chance at the championship and three years before this time had been knocked out by Jeffries. But Griffith, although I considered him Johnson's superior and other judges considered him at least his equal, was the veriest playing in old Bob's hands. Fitz used to maul him around, outbox him and outslug him at his own pleasure. While Johnson may have improved considerably after this, I never could conceive of him improving to an extent to put him on a plane with Fitzsimmons.

"Of course Johnson was a wonderful defensive boxer and probably always will be. But I don't consider a man a great fighter just because he can keep from getting beaten. That's the reason I never thought Jim Jeffries a wonder. He never was an aggressive fighter, and most of his battles were won by letting the other fellow wear himself out fighting him. It is the same with Johnson. In none of the fights in which I have seen him has Johnson been aggressive. I doubt if he ever had an equal on the defence, but that is only half of the game. Fitzsimmons was especially good on the defence and offence.

"If Johnson was the greatest fighter in the world he never has shown any marked ability in disposing of his opponents. He was about at the zenith of his career when he won the championship from Tommy Burns, while Tommy Burns probably was one of the weakest men who ever held the title. Yet Johnson couldn't knock Burns out; he scored a technical knockout to his credit merely because the Australian police did not want to let Burns receive any more punishment.

"Two years later Johnson took on the shell of Jeffries, a man whom even a fair second rater of the present day probably could have beaten. But Jeffries stayed fifteen rounds with Jack before he was put away. (I have heard it argued that Johnson was merely playing with Jeff in the bout and could have finished it in half the time had he chosen to do so. But I fail to see any ground for such belief. Johnson is inordinately egotistical, and I think if he could have beaten Jim with one punch he would have done so. There was no possible financial reason for his letting Jeff stay, either, for Johnson had already disposed of his interest in the moving pictures and could not have cared much whether or not they were a success or a failure."

Quick Suggests a Baseball Reform

I now wish to take a moment or two for the reform of baseball.

Every season starts off well, and three times out of four is spoiled in midsummer by the fact that some team has run away with the pennant. Down in the cellar, too, will be found almost any season, some two or three teams which are making no fight except to keep out of last place.

The cause of this is perfectly obvious, and its cure is equally plain. Men like Mack and McGraw not only have the best men, but their power is so great that they reach out into the minors and snap up every good youngster who shows big league form.

There is a scriptural text which reads, "To him that hath shall be given, and to him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath," but so long as Providence attends to the application of this principle, there would seem to be no call for league rules and regulations to be framed for the increase of the advantage of him who hath over him who hath not.

The rules should be changed so that the weakest club in the superior league would have first choice among the stars of the inferiors. I leave the details to Mr. Fullerton; but I insist that something of the sort should be done.

No minor star should be purchasable by any big league team until all the club below .500 in the table of "standing of the clubs" have waived on him.

All drafts should be made by the league and the men drafted should go into a jackpot—to be opened the tail enders. After the tailenders have exercised first choice and thus perhaps picked up a Walter Johnson, a Frank Baker, a Tyrus Cobb or a Hans Wagner the team next above should be given second choice.

The power of one great player to even things up is illustrated by the effect of Johnson's acquisition by Washington. It was far better for the league and for baseball for him to go to a weak team. It would have been a bad thing if Mack had acquired him.

Give the weak teams the strong recruits as a matter of right, and we shall soon see those hard gruelling finishes in all the leagues which as a fan I for one delight in—and all fans are alike in this.

Then we shall not have the July slump in half the towns. The interest will grow until the last game is played, for every league will give us a horse race finish.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, July 21—Predictions that black rust would become more pernicious tended to bring about an advance today in the price of wheat. Crop advices from Europe were also of a bullish tenor, especially as to Russia, Roumania and Bulgaria. After opening the same as last night to ⅜@½c higher, the market made a general upturn.

The close was steady, ⅝c to ¾@⅞c net higher.

Need of rain led to a rise in corn. What selling there was came from speculators who relied on the chance of a decline, resulting from promised showers. Prices opened ⅜c to ⅝@¾c higher, and seemed inclined to continue within that range.

The close was steady, ¼c to ½c above last night.

Oats hardened with corn. Business, however, was light.

Provisions showed strength as a result of the bulge in grain and because of the firmness of the hog market. Pork led the advance.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, July 21.—Trading in stocks today was again largely influenced by foreign conditions. London's quotations for Americans were appreciably lower and dealings here soon recorded a two-point loss in Baltimore & Ohio and one point in New Haven. Both issues of Baltimore & Ohio soon descended to new low records, as did also Erie common and first preferred. St. Paul, New York Central and Canadian Pacific were slightly lower, with gains in the Harrimans, Lehigh Valley and Steel. Sale of 100 shares of Big Four preferred at 40, a ten-point decline, was among the unusual features. The list inclined to sag before the end of the first half hour.

The highly professional and technical character of the market was demonstrated before the end of the morning session when unconfirmed rumors that the freight rates decision would be handed down later in the day and that it would prove distinctly favorable, were effective in causing a hasty covering of shorts. Steel was up a point on circumstantial reports that the quarterly statement of earnings to be issued next week would exceed recent estimates. Bonds were irregular.

The oversold condition of the market brought a sudden reversal today. Favorable crop news and the probable imminence of the eastern freight rate decision precipitated a hurried retreat of the bear faction. The closing was strong.

Short covering was on a broader scale, the whole list advancing in spirited fashion. Numerous gains of one to two points above yesterday were established.

DAILY MARKET LETTER.

(J. S. Phillips, Member of Chicago Board of Trade, North American Building.)

Chicago, July 21.—Wheat shorts bought heavily today. Russian news was again bullish. Country sold cash wheat heavily on the bulge. Tone of market firm, with only limited breaks indicated. Northwest Miller special bulletins admitting extensive rust damage in northwest a feature. Cash corn and oats advanced ¼c to ½c. Good demand conditions favor consignments. Wheat premiums steady at 1c over for 2 red and 1¼c to 1¾c over for 2 hard. Wheat promises further bulge. Definite news is required from the northwest and Russia will evidently contribute more compliants. Our winter wheat is the only spot in the world with a profuse crop. Present condition of corn is probably around 80 per cent. and the crop is drifting along with skimpy rains to a point where excessive August downpours will be urgent. We believe the situation warrants attention to purchasing side.

Huerta, Fallen Dictator, is Aboard Dresden Bound for Jamaica.

Puerto, Mexico, July 21.—Without even a shout of "Good-bye" to mark his departure from Mexican soil, General Huerta, fallen dictator, steamed away last night at 7:30 o'clock aboard the German warship Dresden for Jamaica. With him were members of his family and General Blanquet, former minister of war, with his wife and daughter.

General Huerta referred to President Wilson in a conversation with newspaper men just before leaving shore, but true to precedent, was non-committal in all his remarks. He professed deep regard for the American people, characterizing the statement that he was the enemy of the United States as a "lie."

Going aboard the Dresden Huerta carried nothing except his black paper cigarette.

Blanquet was at his side, both hands laden with suit cases. Aides followed similarly burdened.

Huerta's face lightened somewhat when the correspondents approached and he began to talk to them.

"But there is absolutely nothing I want to say to you," he said.

"What about Bryan? What do you think of him?" asked one man.

"I want to say nothing whatever about him," replied the ex-president.

Another asked him about President Wilson.

"Mr. Wilson is president of the United States," he answered, "and as such I respect him. I must be careful what I say about him, too, for let me remind you that in all this affair I have never officially mentioned his name. The nearest I came to it was in my note of resignation, and then only by inference.

"Oh, yes, yes, he has spoken of me many times indeed. He has been kind enough to send me messages, but I never have felt like using his name.

"However, as a matter of fact, do you know, Wilson, Carranza and Villa are my best friends. They have introduced me rather widely. I am merely one of the sons of Mexico, no more important myself than any one of these."

He waved his hands to include a little group of officers and laboring men, who had gathered to hear him.

"But they have advertised me," he continued. "Oh, yes, they have done that," and the grizzled fugitive blew contemptuously a cloud of cigarette smoke and shrugged his shoulders. "Oh, now, do not misunderstand me. I have heard it said that I am an enemy of the United States. That is a lie. I admire the American people, and I have all respect for Mr. Wilson as president of that people.

"The United States is certainly the most powerful nation on this side of the Atlantic and perhaps the most powerful in the world, and her people are entitled to the admiration of all. No one knows better than I that there may be wide difference between the people and the government."

As to the immediate future of his country General Huerta was evasive, but he did say that peace was not quite at hand.

"When real peace will come," he commented, "is difficult to say. There must be a crisis in all diseases, physical as well as sociological. Naturally there is a crisis due here. It may come in one month, two months, three months, but it will come,"

"But will that mean intervention?" was asked.

The officers, the laboring men and all others looked at him more closely, but with no loss of time Huerta shot back emphatically, "No, never."

General Huerta, whose wife had been signaling him to "come on," moved away toward the landing at the pier. He called back that he expected to write out a detailed statement and send it ashore. But he never did.

The picture men who had been busy all the time, asked him to stop a minute more and he obligingly posed for them while they continued grinding out a record of his last moments ashore.

Work of re-surfacing the Cathedral of Immaculate Conception is progressing rapidly and it is thought that by the last of the week the entire surface of the building facing Calhoun street, will be finished, which will make it look as though it was a new structure.

The same company that is doing this work re-surfaced the old First building and also the St. John Reformed church. Six men are working all the time on the scaffold and four men are on the ground supplying the workmen on the scaffold with mortar. Two others have started to build scaffolds on the north side of the building, which will be finished next.

TOSSES BABY TO CROWD; SAVES IT

Chicago Mother Run Down by Motor Car, But Babe Escapes.

Chicago, July 21.—Mrs. Mary Sullivan of 432 Aberdeen street, carrying her baby in her arms, started across Jackson boulevard yesterday afternoon in the surge of a State street crowd answering the commands of the traffic officer's whistle.

R. Boegelsack, og 10522 Avenue M, South Chicago, driving his motor car, approached the crossing applied the brakes. The car stopped hesitatingly and then lunged toward the crowd.

Mrs. Sullivan screamed and, swinging around facing the curb she had just left, tossed her baby at the crowd.

A dozen pair of hands reached into the air.

The car struck the mother and knocked her to the pavement just as the infant fell into the arms of E. B. Duffy of 303 West Twenty-second place.

Abraham Levy of 643 West Thirteenth street was also caught by the automobile and tossed into the boulevard.

Mrs. Sullivan and Levy were carried off the street. Duffy gave the baby into the care of a policeman, who sat with it in his arms while the ambulance waited for the victims.

At the Iroquois Memorial hospital it was said Mrs. Sullivan had suffered a concussion of the brain and bruises, rendering her condition serious. Levy was bruised about the head and legs.

Boegelsack was taken to the Central station on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. He said his brakes had failed to work properly.

Labori Follows Bourget's Testimony, Quoting Latter's Novel.

Witnesses in Caillaux Case Describe Shooting of Figaro Editor.

Paris, July 21.—Mme. Henriette Caillaux was up at 7 this morning preparing for the second day's hearing of the charge against her of the wilful murder on March 16 of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro. The wife of the former premier and minister of finance took an early breakfast and before 8 o'clock was waiting for her husband who, however, did not call at the prison of the Conciergerie till between 9 and 10 o'clock. The prisoner and her husband conversed for half an hour and afterward she lunched.

"I feel better than I did yesterday," Mme. Caillaux said to-day to the solicitous prison warden when he asked today about her health. The prisoner had previously looked through a mass of morning papers and had found that generally she had been sympathetically treated. The stenographic report of her testimony filled sixteen columns in some of the newspapers and besides this there were many appreciations of her dexterous arrangement of facts and of the feeling she had put into her descriptions of her agony.

Makes Herself at Home.

The court was a little late in assembling to-day and meanwhile Mme. Caillaux talked over her case with Fernand Labori, her advocate, in a private waiting room. After Judge Louis Albanet and his associates had taken their places on the bench Mme. Caillaux entered the prisoner's enclosure without hesitation and with an air of making herself at home. She was dressed precisely as in the first day of the trial. She took off her coat and looked quietly around the crowded court. Dark circles under her eyes and her quick gestures seemed to betray the strain she was undergoing. Joseph Caillaux, the prisoner's husband, then entered the court and took his place among the witnesses. He was accompanied by two detectives, owing to the fact that a group of bystanders had hooted him and shouted insults at him as he left the prison after visiting his wife.

Two office boys were the first witnesses to-day. They described the arrival

LEADERS SHAKE HANDS WITH KING

Redmond and Dillon Greet Monarch First Time at Conference.

London, July 21.—So deep is the interest taken by all classes in the crisis which has arisen out of the Irish home rule question that great crowds gathered today outside Buckingham palace to witness the arrival of the various party leaders who are to participate in the conference inaugurated by King George with a view to bringing about a peaceful settlement.

The Right Hon. James Lowther speaker of the house of commons who was chosen to preside over the conference, was the first to put in an appearance. He was quickly followed by the eight men who represent the various parties—liberal, unionist, nationalist and Ulsterite. All came in motor cars with the exception of the Marquis of Lansdowne, who walked.

King George, with Baron Stamfordham, his private secretary, received the statesmen in the chamber where the privy council always meets and he shook hands cordially with all of them. Probably this was the first time that John E. Redmond and John Dillon, the Irish nationalist leaders, had ever exchanged greetings with their sovereign as it had been the practice for nationalist members of parliament to remain away from all functions where members of the house of common were likely to be brought into contact with royalty.

The meeting of the conservatives and liberal leaders on such intimate footing was apparently friendly but could not have been cordial, as Premier Asquith and Andrew Bonar Law have been barely on speaking terms as Mr. Law practically accused the premier in the house of commons of lying about recent government plans to suppress the Ulster volunteers. The Marquis of Lansdowne, leader of the unionists in the house of lords, and David Lloyd George, chancellor of the exchequer, two of the other conferees represent the most extreme aristocratic and democratic schools of British politics and are generally believed to be bitter personal enemies. At the same time the members of the Irish nationalist and Ulster unionist factions could not have felt much pleasure in finding themselves in such close association. Since personal feeling among politicians in the United Kingdom never ran so high as at present the atmosphere of the gathering could not have been otherwise than extremely chilly and formal. After a brief conversation King George withdrew from the meeting about noon leaving the conferees to their deliberations.

The conference at Buckingham palace, after being in session for only about an hour and a half, adjourned for the day but will meet again tomorrow.

King Addresses Conferees.

King George in receiving the conferees at Buckingham palace made the following brief speech:

"It is with feelings of satisfaction and hopefulness that I receive you here today and I thank you for the manner in which you have responded to my summons. It is also a matter for congratulation that the speaker of the house of commons has consented to preside over your meetings.

"My intervention at this moment may be regarded as a new departure."

PATMONT DROPS OUT ONCE MORE

Temperance Worker Eludes Friends on Train to Chicago.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 21.—Rev. Louis R. Patmont, temperance worker, has again disappeared, having left the train on the Soo line bound for Chicago some time after 2 o'clock this morning, according to a telegram received from Rev. Claud F. Witty, dated Lakeville, Ill., by Rev. C. L. Milton of Milwaukee.

Rev. Mr. Patmont, who disappeared from Detroit more than a month ago and was found at Rib Lake, Wis., Saturday, passed through Rugby Junction early today en route to Detroit. He was accompanied by Rev. Claud F. Witty and A. Y. Malcolmson of Detroit. It was planned to place Patmont in a sanitarium at Detroit until he had recuperated. Rev. C. L. Milton of Milwaukee, who identified Patmont on Sunday, reached home to-day.

"Patmont is a very nervous man and part of the time seems to be demented," said Mr. Milton. "Patmont told me that the real cause for his disappearance from Detroit was that he was held up by two men who threatened to kill him if he did not leave the city. The men who threatened him gave him $80, he said."

HEAVY GUARD ALONG ROUTE

When Young Shah of Persia Takes Constitutional Oath of Office.

Teheran, Persia, July 21.—Sultan Ahmed Mirzathe, shah of Persia, today, on attaining his official majority, took the constitutional oath of office in the palace of the national council. The ceremony was very brief and took place in the presence of the members of the national council, the royal princes, high state officials, foreign diplomatic representatives and their wives.

The little shah, accompanied by the regent, Abul Kassim Khan Nassenel Mulk, drove to the palace of the national council in a glass coach drawn by eight white horses. The procession passed through the gaily decorated streets of the Persian capital, which were carefully guarded. Large bodies of police and troops were stationed in strategic points and the entire route was lined by police and native gendarmerie, as well as the famous Cossack brigade, while mounted men surrounded the shah's carriage and also those of the cabinet ministers and other officials who followed him. On entering the palace of the national council the shah bowed to the assemblage and then pronounced the constitutional oath. Immediately after the ceremony he proceeded to the mosque for prayer.

Demands Previous Agreement Against Wholesale Vengeance.

Washington, July 21.—Provisional President Carbajal does not intend to surrender unconditionally to Gen. Carranza and will concentrate his military forces and resist an invasion rather than permit the constitutionalists to enter Mexico City without previous agreements not to wreak vengeance on the lives and property of those who supported Gen. Huerta.

This was the tenor of information from authoratative sources today in Mexico City to Washington diplomats. It spread a feeling of pessimism in some quarters over the possibility of an amicable settlement of the revolution. Emilio Rabasa, head of the delegation which represented Gen. Huerta at the Niagara conference, arrived here today

WILL RUN DOWN THAT MILLION

California Rail Commission Would Know What Calhoun Did With It.

San Francisco, July 21.—When the California railroad commission resumes July 28 the inquiry, begun yesterday, into the financial condition of the United Railroads company, of San Francisco, another effort will be made to discover what became of the $1,000,000 diverted by Patrick Calhoun, former president, from the funds of the corporation.

Jesse W. Lilienthal, present head of the company, told the commission yesterday that to the best of his knowledge only $300,000 of the amount, all of which Calhoun has stated was invested in the Solano irrigated farms project, was used for that purpose.

The proceedings revealed that the company's books showed a deficit of $4,880,471 at the time of its last annual report. Of this amount, $3,906,909 could not be accounted for. If, when the commission's hearing is resumed a deficit is still shown, the commission stated it would stop the company from paying further dividends.

QUARREL ABOARD YACHT.

American Legation Secretary Resents Harbor Master's Orders.

Christiana, July 21.—A serious quarrel occurred here yesterday on board the American steam yacht Pauline, between Franklin M. Gunther, secretary of the American legation, and the harbor master. The trouble arose over a request of the harbor master for the Pauline to change her anchorage, as she was occupying the space reserved for the German emperor's yacht, Meteor, and other foreign racing craft.

Mr. Gunther protested angrily against the harbor master's orders and, it is said ended the quarrel by knocking the officials cap off his head. During the trouble a woman guest on board the Pauline endeavored to soothe the disputants. The affair has created much discussion here.

Man Involved in Mulhall Charges Says He Will Appeal to People.

Washington, July 21.—Representative James T. McDermott of Illinois, to-day on the floor of the house offered his resignation to take effect immediately. McDermott is under charges in connection with the lobby investigation.

Representative McDermott, democrat, representing a constituency which includes the stock yards district of Chicago, was one of the figures in the exposures of Martin M. Mulhall, star witness in the lobby investigation. A minority report of the investigating committee ready to come before the house

Came as Sensation.

His resignation came as a sensation to-day when immediately after the house had assembled he rose to a question of personal privilege and offered it from the floor, declaring he would "appeal his case to the people of the Fourth district of Illinois." He said he had already forwarded his resignation to Governor Dunne and had announced himself as a candidate for re-election. He presented a letter to the speaker announcing his resignation.

"Unfortunately," he said, "I came to this house a poor man; fortunately for myself, however, taking into consideration the character of the charges against me, I leave this house a poor man. I have been compelled during my services as a member of this house to borrow money from my friends. It so happened that afterward they became opponents of legislation which passed this house, affecting their busines, as pawnbrokers and as liquor dealers.

WHO PUT POISON IN SUGAR BOWL?

Illinois to Probe Case of Mrs. Adams, Victim of Bichloride.

Decatur, Ill., July 21.—How did bichloride of mercury get into the sugar bowl at the home of J. F. Adams, 1612 East Eldorado street?

Its discovery through an analysis by the state board of health in a Chicago laboratory revealed the cause of the serious illness of Mrs. Adams, but throws no light on the facts concerning its presence there. Whether some one put the poison into the sugar bowl or whether it was already in the sugar when the package of sugar was brought to the house remains unanswered.

The state board found such a large percentage of the poison in the sample sent them that an inspector will reach Decatur tomorrow to conduct an investigation.

Mrs. Adams was taken ill Monday, July 13. Mr. Adams thereupon recalled an unusual taste in the sugar and took a sample to W. P. Shade, city commissioner of public health and safety, who at once forwarded it to the state authorities.

Investigation at the store where the sugar was purchased indicated that the entire barrel had not been poisoned, as there had been no other complaints.

Bichloride of mercury, commonly known as corrosive sublimate, is sometimes used to exterminate insect pests, and is in the form of a white powder which hardly would be noticeable to the eye when combined with sugar. Mr. Adams protests there was none of the poison in use in his house.

Mrs. Adams, though for a time seriously ill, seems to be recovering. No other member of the Adams family suffered.

CARBAJAL MAY PUT UP FIGHT

Favor Aggressive Attitude.

While denying themselves to callers, it became known that they favored a more aggressive attitude by Provisional President Carbajal to secure guarantees of protection for people in Mexico City and federal territory generally. They made it plain that Mr. Carbajal had no objection to turning over the government to Gen. Carranza, but must insist on some assurances in advance that property would not be despoiled and that there would be no wholesale executions or arrests.

Mr. Castellot said he was confident that ultimately there would be an agreement in that connection between Carbajal and Carranza.

In some quarters there was a disposition today to regard the situation as unfavorable. It was learned that the three commissioners announced as having been sent by Provisional President Carbajal to interview Carranza in reality were unofficial and voluntary peace envoys.

Not Regarded as Unusual.

Mr. Castellot, however, did not regard that as unusual, pointing out that inasmuch as Carranza had refused to treat with a commission officially appointed by Carbajal, it was necessary to seek unofficial methods of communication. Another aspect of the situation which was commented upon was the knowledge that Gen. Carranza, while informing the American consuls at Monterey that he would receive a commission from Carbajal, made it plain that he could do so only to arrange for the unconditional surrender by the Mexico City authorities.

These uncompromising terms have puzzled diplomats who were hoping for a quick solution. They believe the decisive influence for peace of a continuation of civil strife rests with the United States. There was no indication today how far the American government was prepared to exert pressure on Carranza to obtain an amnesty and guarantee. Diplomats were watching with keen interest the reports stating that Gen. Villa was again threatening a break with Carranza.

at the offices of the Figaro on the day of the crime of Mme. Caillaux. They told how she waited and gave details of her entrance into the room occupied by Gaston Calmette and of hearing shots. One of the boys, Adrian Nicet, crouched down on the witness stand and uttered a series of low cries to show how he had found M. Calmette sheltering himself behind his desk.

Paul Bourget, the "immortal" who was with Calmette in his office at the moment when Mme Caillaux's card was brought in then told the jury of the incident.

"'You will not see her?' I said.

Master Stroke by Labori.

Maitre Labori then thrilled the overcrowded court room by reading a dialogue from Bourget's novel "The Demon of The Midi," in which the characters discuss and condemn the publication of the heroine's love letters. Coming immediately after M. Bourget's eulogy of Gaston Calmette with which he had closed his testimony, the reading of the dialogue by Maitre Labori was regarded by observing lawyers as a master stroke.

Maitre Labori's voice was musical and full of dramatic feeling. When he had concluded Paul Bourget remarked: "Literature is not life." He agreed, however, that private letters ought not to be published and said he did not believe Calmette had intended to put the Caillaux letters into print.

The scene of the shooting was then described by employes of the Figaro. Charles Giraudeau, a reporter; Henri Roulean, a messenger, and Jean Cercle, a telephone operator, related portions of their experiences. They said Louis Voisin, of the advertising department was talking with Henri Honore, an artist, and Edouard Masson, in the room where Mme. Caillaux was waiting to see M. Calmette.

Mme. Caillaux Interrupts.

"We never mentioned Caillaux," said Voisin, "as she said yesterday."

Mme Caillaux interposed, saying: "I wish to ask M. Voisin whether one of his friends did not say: 'is the sheet ready?' and whether M. Voisin did not answer, 'we have a great paper on Caillaux tomorrow.'"

"That is absolutely false," said Voisin.

Mme. Caillaux: "I heard Voisin say to his friends: 'It costs dear but we are letting loose the hunting dogs on all sides.'"

Honore was then called and denied that Caillaux had been mentioned and Masson's deposition was read to the same effect.

His Description Vivid.

Other members of the staff of the Figaro then testified, among them Louis Latzarus, who gave a vivid description of the scene when Mme. Caillaux shot M. Calmette.

Latzarus said he heard shots and ran to Calmette's room where Calmette had sunk in a state of collapse in a chair. M. Sirac, he said, was holding a woman by the wrists. She cried: "Let me go. I am not going to escape."

Sirac then let her go, said the witness and she stood near the door, clear eyed and with her face neither pale nor flushed. She seemed untroubled by the fifteen editors who quickly gathered around her.

"She began to speak," said the witness, "saying, 'since there is no justice in France——'

"'Shut your mouth,' said one of the editors. 'After what you have done, keep quiet.'

"'I wasn't speaking to you,' said Mme Caillaux."

Mistress of Herself.

Latzarus declared that Mme. Caillaux was perfectly mistress of herself when he saw her after the crime. He admitted that he had talked about the Caillaux campaign many times with Calmette, adding: "My chief said he had diplomatic documents important enough absolutely to crush Caillaux."

After Calmette had printed the "Thy Joe" letter, according to Latzarus, he remarked: "My pockets are empty. I have nothing more."

Judge Albanel then asked Mme Caillaux if she had anything to say about the Victor Fabre document and Mme Caillaux replied: "I had no fear of that because I knew the part my husband had taken in the Rochett affair."

Then alluding to her calmness after the shooting Mme. Caillaux said: "All the world knew that night the condition of M. Calmette except myself and I didn't know until the next day that my action was irreparable."

Maitre Labori remarked to the court that two of the documents found upon the person of Gaston Calmette had been sent to President Poincare and that all the others had been sent to Georges Prestat, the president of the board of directors of the Figaro. "I see Mr. Prestat among the spectators," continued Labori, "perhaps he can tell the court what was done with those papers."

"The papers I received," said M. Prestat on arising, "were only copies in the handwriting of M. Calmette. One was the Fabre document, then already published; the second was the "Thy Joe" letters from which the intimate passages had been expurgated. I considered I had the right to destroy these papers and I burned them." Then looking toward the jury he said. "They had cost the life of my relative."

At half past four o'clock the court took a recess.

Mme. Caillaux took frequent notes of the testimony during the day, writing on a pad placed upon her knees and she accumulated quite a large portfolio.

Most Important Testimony.

The most important testimony at the second days' hearing was that of President M. Poincare, of the republic, whose deposition was taken by Judge Emil Forichon, the first president of the court of appeals. This narrates how Joseph Caillaux, then a minister of state, had called upon President Poincare on the day Calmette was killed, and had spoken about the probable publication in the Figaro of letters between himself and Mme. Caillaux. In the course of an excited talk M. Calliaux exclaimed, according to the deposition: "If Calmette publishes the letters I will kill him."

Joseph Caillaux also took the stand. He looked very young to have been premier of France and chief of the important radical party. After relating incidents of his private life after his marriage with Mme. Gueydan, he explained the circumstances of the writing of the two letters to Mme. Raynouard, who afterwards became Mme. Caillaux. His voice trembled and he was obviously ill at east, but he gathered composure as he proceeded.

QUITS PLACE UNDER FIRE

"It is true I have not had the educational training and perhaps the social training and advantages that other members of this house may have had. "I have been invited to many places in Chicago which perhaps some members may think above my social station, but I have preferred to associate with the people who sent me to congress and when I am at home in Chicago I am to be found at my accustomed haunts and among my old companions, associating with the men and boys in the great union stock yards.

The Mulhall Charge.

Mulhall charged that McDermott had permitted him to use his congressional frank for circulating matter for the manufacturers and that McDermott had claimed he had received $7,500 from local pawnbrokers to work against the federal loan shark law, and a $2,000 campaign contribution from a Chicago brewers' association. McDermott's defense was that money received from the pawnbrokers was in the nature of personal loans, and that the brewers had contributed only $500 out of personal friendship. He also denied a charge by Mulhall that he had forged Harold F. McCormick's name to a check for $250.

The case was to come before the house for a vote Thursday.

W. Va., to bridge over the difficulties between Mr. Warburg and the banking committee, before which he has refused to appear. No word had been received from either Mr. Warburg or Senator O'Gorman.

Warburg May Appear.

Senators of the banking committee denied they had any part in the effort to induce Mr. Warburg to appear but thought it probable he would do so in which case they believed there would be little opposition to his confirmation.

Senator Vardaman, one of the democrats opposing Mr. Jones, issued a statement declaring he would not vote for him.

"I have the same objection to him and men of the same kind being put in control and management of our currency system that the Presbyterian would have in the pagan teaching theology in a Christian church or an imperialist administering laws designed to establish a democracy. I am sorry the president appointed him," he said.

Trust Program Now Complete.

The administration's anti-trust program was nearing completion today in senate committees. Revision of the Clayton bill had been agreed upon in the judiciary committee and the railway securities bill was receiving its finishing touches in the inter-state commerce committee. Important changes were made by the judiciary committee in the Clayton bill as it passed the house. One of the most important was one providing for a court review of orders issued by the inter-state commerce commission or the proposed federal trade commission against corporations found to have violated the trust laws. The leaders were determined today to press more vigorously for prompt action when the full trust program comes before the senate. To that end they may insist upon longer sessions with the possibility of night sessions.

Discuss New Haven Move.

Practically all the time at the cabinet meeting to-day was devoted to discussion of the government's impending anti-trust suit to dissolve the New Haven railroad merger. Attorney General McReynolds presented a complete statement of the efforts of the department of justice to bring the railroad system within the law without a court fight. Some sort of an official statement was expected later in the day.

WELCOMED WITH A ROLLING PIN

Howard Sargent Wants His Marriage Dissolved and Alleges Reasons.

Howard C. Sargent, of 2809 John street, has gone to the circuit court with a divorce complaint against Mary A. Sargent and he alleges reasons in abundance why he should be set free from the woman he took to wife in September, 1911, and from whom he separated Monday, July 20. He says that on Sunday night when he returned home his spouse met him with a rolling pin and with that traditional weapon of the housewife bade him welcome and that on Monday she hit him, beat him with a chair and grabbed a table knife with which she threatened to take his life. He says she treated him with cruelty from the beginning of their married life and within three months had told him she "would give him a life of hell," and made good, "raising so much hell around," according to the language of the complaint, "that they were thrown out of their home by the landlord." He ascribes to her a terrible temper, charges that she called him names too vile, obscene and indecent to put in the complaint, went once for four days without cooking meals for himself and little son, often refused to cook for them, chased his relatives out of the house when they called, broke up furniture faster than he could afford to buy it, bombarded him with dishes once when he had his boy on his arm, made him a target for plates and threw the chairs down the steps, breaking them. He asks the custody of a 2-year-old son. There is another child of 8 months.

Notes of the Courts.

The the last will and testament of the late Philip Fissell, just filed for probate, leaves all his property, real and personal to his wife, Anna M. Fissell without condition and names her executrix. The document is one of the shortest of the kind filed in a long time. A hundred words sufficed the testator to dispose of his estate.

Save for two divorce suits scheduled for hearing before Judge W. C. Ryan in the superior court Tuesday afternoon there was nothing doing in that tribunal all day.

Charles B. Fitch has begun suit in the superior court against the Maumee Brick & Tile company to collect $100 on account.

Briefs have been filed by attorneys representing John W. Bruns in an application for a rehearing of the suit of Bruns against Daniel C. Cope to break the will of Cope's late wife, who left a large estate. The supreme court recently handed down a ruling for Cope, who won in the circuit court of Allen county.

Complains of his Partner.

In a suit filed in the superior court by Edward Fairfield against Jesse Peck, the plaintiff asks for the dissolution of the partnership existing between himself and the defendant, doing business as the Fairfield Trucking company, prays the appointment of a receiver for the business, the sale of its property and the winding up of the business. The complaint says the defendant assumes full control of the business, and does no work to promote the concern's prosperity, but on the contrary is causing it to lose ground.

Boys and Matches the Cause of Bad Blaze and Big Loss.

Fire starting in the haymow of the barn at 1828 South Calhoun street, owned by Samuel Bonahoon, communicated itself to the adjoining barn owned by Joseph Schnee and before the fire department was able to extinguish the flames, both structures were badly damaged and it is estimated that the loss will total nearly $300. It is believed that boys playing with matches in the Bonahoon barn caused the fire.

For a time several other frame structures in the neighborhood were threatened by the flames and sparks and the danger was made more serious owing to the continued dry weather. When the fire department apparatus reached the blaze both barns were burning fiercely and for a time threatened the entire neighborhood, because of a strong wind that fanned the flames.

WOULD OUST OIL COMPANIES.

Suit Filed to Drive Several Concerns Out of Oklahoma.

Atoko, Okla., July 21.—Proceedings asking that the Texas company, an oil pipe line and purchasing corporation and the Producers Oil company and Central Petroleum company, producers of crude petroleum, be ousted from Oklahoma were instituted in district court here yesterday. The petition charges the Texas company as the parent corporation, and the producing companies as subsidiaries, violate the state anti-trust laws in their alleged combination.

Amos L. Beattie, of New York, general counsel for the Texas companies, replying to the petition contested the jurisdiction of the district court. Ten days were allowed for filing briefs.

The state's petition asks that the license to do business in Oklahoma of the accused companies be cancelled, their property in the state forfeited and fines aggregating $4,000,000 be imposed.

Word to that effect was received today by Indian commissioner Sells. Spopee is a Piegan Indian, but before 1870 had been closely identified with the Blackfeet. The Indian office asked that he be formally adopted by the Blackfeet in order that he might share in the rights and privileges of the members of the tribe. The tribal council, at a meeting at Browning, Mont., took action and he now will receive his 320 acres of land.

UNION MINERS AS GUARDS.

Sheriff at Bellaire, O., Recruits Force of 150 for Strike Duty.

Bellaire, Ohio, July 21.—Acting on the advice of Timothy Hogan, attorney general of Ohio, who last night informed him that he could legally employ men to guard property, Sheriff John Anderson today recruited 150 union miners to protect pump men and engineers at mines where the strike is effective. The pump men and engineers refused to work unless they were given protection, and the union, which is not in sympathy with the Industrial Workers of the World, provided the guards, who were sent to the mines at Wheeling Creek, Lansing, Barton and Neff. With the pumps going it is said that much valuable mine property will be saved.

COBLATZ LANDED IN JAIL.

I. W. W. Leader Faces Treason Charge at Steubenville, O.

Steubenville, O., July 21.—Joseph Coblatz, said by the employes of Jefferson county to be the leader of the Industrial Workers of the World among the miners in Belmont and Jefferson counties, was lodged in jail here last night, charged with treason. His bond was placed at $10,000. The county authorities, including Sheriff W. A. Hunscroft, and Prosecuting Attorney C. W. Brown declare Coblatz took charge of the I. W. W. followers after the departure of Joseph Etter. Quiet prevailed throughout the troubled district last night, although a large force of deputies remained at Bradley.

Death Threats Pass in Divorce Action

Mrs. Adele D. Shorb, wife of Donald McM. Shorb, is the woman involved in the famous "death threat divorce case," which recently came to trial in San Francisco.

Presiding Judge John J. Van Nostrand, Donald Shorb, the defendant, and his attorney, Charles A. Lee, all received anonymous letters signed by a skull and crossbones threatening them with death if Shorb contests his wife's suit.

The missives were scrawled and misspelled, but have the appearance of having been written by a person of education and disguised to emulate ignorance.

Lee and Shorb have received several of the letters. Only one of them, written to Shorb, is dated. Attorney Lee turned his missives over to the postal inspectors.

BILIOUSNESS

There is Nothing Like Common Sense and USOLINE to Cure Biliousness.

You can dose yourself for this symptom, and for that symptom.

But what's the use so long as you leave the CAUSE untouched?

This is where common sense comes in—to think out what makes you bilious, what gives you sour stomach, gas, belching, sick headache, heartburn, pains in back, liver and kidneys, indigestion, yellow skin, pimples, nervousness and depressed feeling.

It's Constipation.

The bowels are clogged up, irregular, not doing their work properly.

You take a "dose of pills," a bigger dose than last time, because that's a peculiarity of astringent drugs, that it takes larger and still larger doses to have effect. These violent purgatives relieve the bowels, but it's a painful operation and simply aggravates the condition and does not cure the constipation.

Now try USOLINE—it isn't a cathartic, a purgative, a laxative, or drug of any kind—simply a pure mineral oil pumped from the earth, in Russia, and re-refined by the OIL PRODUCTS COMPANY, New York.

It's tasteless, odorless, colorless. The system does not absorb USOLINE because it is a mineral oil, and that's why a mineral oil is preferable for the purpose—we want it in the bowels, and USOLINE simply passes down the throat and stomach into the bowels and lubricates the whole passage, causing the movements to be regular, easy, painless and natural.

Then your constipation disappears, and with it biliousness and the rest of your troubles.

Try USOLINE—There is nothing like it. Give it to your children for upset stomachs and constipation. They like to take it. Sold by druggists generally, 25c. and 50c. a large bottle, and $1 a three pint tin. Also in capsules, 2 doz. in a box, 50c. Ask or write for free printed matter.

Special Prize For Which All Registered Babies Compete.

Visitors to the pavilion have seen and admired the handsome combination cart and horse that has been on exhibition during the season. It was thought best at first to give the prancing horse with its attached carriage to the handsomest child between two and three years old that might attend the Baby Show, because a baby of that age would coo and clap its little hands with glee when holding the lines which supposedly guide and direct the horse, because at the slightest pull the horse prances in great fashion. Inasmuch as the Baby Show has always been limited to babies two years old and under, the horse and carriage will be awarded within the age limit. Mothers have expressed much admiration for the horse and carriage and have frequently declared that should it be given to their babies they would preserve it until their kiddies could enjoy it to the full. Therefore, every baby under two years of age that is registered on the day of the baby show, or before that time by mail, will be given a chance to possess the handsome special prize. It is really a valuable and unique gift, as it cost Mr. Williams $20.00 to purchase it in New York city. Should you register your baby by mail it will be necessary for you to stop at the registration table in the pavilion on the day of the Baby Show in order to secure your registration number.

MAN-ANIMAL KNOWLES, NAKED AND UNARMED, TO LIVE LIKE CAVE-MAN IN SIERRA WILDS.

Joseph Knowles, the "Modern Adam," entering the forest to live man-animal existence, and below as he appears in the bear pelt he secured by clubbing beast to death in pitfall.

San Francisco, Cal., July 20.—To convince skeptics that a man can go into the wilderness naked and unarmed, without food or implement and wrest from it sustenance and shelter like the beasts, Joseph Knowles who proclaims himself an efficient man-animal will repeat in the California Sierras his widely heralded Maine woods experiment.

Minus clothes, firearms, knife, matches and supplies, this Boston author-artist-trapper who has been dubbed the "Modern Adam," plans to remain in the timbered slopes of the north-California mountains for 60 days, beginning about the middle of July.

He will try to avoid even the sight of another human being, and for that reason has chosen a practicall inaccessible region.

Knowles proposes to build his fires, erect his shelter, provide bodily covering skins, and slay his meat after the manner of the cave-man of half a million years ago.

And at the end of the 60-day period he predicts, he will emerge physically stronger than when he enters the woods, although bearded and forbidding in appearance.

Knowles is a big man, thick of neck, barrel-chested, with a steady grey eye, grey hair and a rumbling voice.

"I'm restless," he said, plucking at his clothes. "I feel like a bear when it comes shedding time. I'm anxious to get off these confounded duds and hit the timber trails—where a man is free."

The skeptics have been saying that Joe's man-animal professions and his proclaimed disgust with the messy routine of civilization are all a pose. It is for their benefit, he says, that he will make the California experiment in antideluvian existence.

"These fellows who assert that a man can't go into the timber and win the battle for life with wit and bare fist alone, like a bear, deer, mountain lion and bob cat, would have us admit that he is inferior to the least of the animals over which he boasts superiority," challenges Knowles. "These timid steam-heat and steam-beer creatures make me tired!

"There's nothing remarkable about my stunt. If there were it would be practically valueless. For I contend that any man with the knowledge of woodcraft and a healthy body can live anywhere you put him—can do what I did in the Maine woods and what I will repeat here.

"Your cave-man progenitor did it. Are you going to admit you're his inferior?"

"The widespread doubt in this connection is a sad commentary on the lengths to which we have drifted away from Nature, the great teacher, healer and character builder."

"I am simply one modern who has not entirely forgotten the cunning and resourcefulness of primeval progenitors—an efficient savage, if you please, underneath the 'scratched skin.'"

Knowles' iron physique and the equipment of woods-lore he acquired as a boy and later as professional guide, fit him especially for his unique undertaking. In his 44th year, he is pronounced by Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, physical director of Harvard, as the equal in strength and development of the famous Sandow, with additional staying powers.

"Look at me," said Knowles in conclusion, stretching his great arms. I'd be a pretty specimen of manhood if I'd admit an inability to emulate the forest creatures in getting a living. What a travesty it is on man's upward climb when, lost in the wilds, he lies down to die merely because his wits are too dull to show him the way to live!"

GYPSY TRIALS ARE VENUED TO WARSAW

Goshen Murder, Assault and Rape Cases Sent to Kosciusko Court to Be Heard.

Goshen, Ind., July 21.—Alleging that owing to intense public prejudice they cannot have fair and impartial trials in Elkhart county, the cases against the three Mendes brothers, members of a gypsy band, indicted here for murder, assault with intent and attempt to commit rape, have been sent to Kosciusko county for trial. The three defendants, Antonio, George and Nicholas Mendes, have been removed to the jail in Warsaw for confinement until the time of the trials. The cases were set for trial in the Elkhart circuit court Monday and a big crowd was present for the event, but the attorneys for the defendants moved a change of venue and Judge Drake granted it. Tony Mendes is charged with murdering Rosa Miller and with attempting to kill her husband, Eli Miller. The crimes were the outgrowth of a fight in the gypsy camp a few miles west of Goshen on June 30. Mrs. Miller was fatally wounded and died in a hospital here.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Acts 25:13-25.

13 And after certain days king Agrippa and Bernice came unto Caesarea to salute Festus.

14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix:

15 About whom, when I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.

16 To whom I answered, It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, and have license to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

17 Therefore, when they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:

19 But had certain questions against him of their own superstition, and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And because I doubted of such manner of questions, I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

21 But when Paul had appealed to be reserved unto the hearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept till I might send him to Caesar.

22 Then Agrippa said unto Festus, I would also hear the man myself. To-morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.

23 And on the morrow, when Agrippa was come, and Bernice, with great pomp, and was entered into the place of hearing, with the chief captains, and principal men of the city, at Festus' commandment Paul was brought forth.

24 And Festus said, King Agrippa, and all men which are here present with us, ye see this man, about whom all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and also here, crying that he ought not to live any longer.

25 But when I found that he had committed nothing worthy of death, and that he himself hath appealed to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

Relieving Traffic Congestions

In launching an effort to secure relief from the congested state of Calhoun street traffic, directors of the Commercial club have engaged in a work of much importance which we hope will bring early results in the form of pronounced relief. It is directed against a condition that is apparent not merely during what are known as the "rush hours" of the day, but amounts to a practically continuous situation. And a very large proportion of the congestion is wholly unnecessary.

Calhoun street, as everyone realizes, is too narrow at best, a condition that resulted because of the fact that those who originally provided the street did not foresee the day when a highway ample for those times would be much too narrow for traffic demands which later years would bring. Chief causes for the present complaint however, must be laid at the doors of the drivers of the big trucks and vans which might just as well traverse Clinton or Harrison streets between the railroads. Until they are forced to do so, however, they will not do it. They insist on getting into the main artery where there is most life and action, and where they may indulge their propensity for sight-seeing rather than take a less-traversed route that would enable them to move more rapidly and with infinitely less difficulty and danger to pedestrians and to other vehicles.

Harrison street is not at all bad as a driveway for heavy traffic. Clinton street is not so good in its present staate, and it is possible that improvement of the street would help a bit. It may as well be understood, however, that nothing will induce the truck drivers to quit Calhoun street until they are forced to do so. Occasionally it may be necessary for trucks to use Calhoun street, but 90 per cent of the traffic of this character could just as well take another street. Employers of the truck drivers who are losing money because their outfits subject themselves to delay in crowding into Calhoun street when it is wholly unnecessary and when much more time is certain to be consumed on the route than if another street were traversed, can do much to relieve the condition by insistence on the change. A mounted traffic officer, armed with definite police instructions to forbid the use of Calhoun street to the big vehicles when it is not absolutely necessary, would be able to do infinitely more to relieve the cause for complaint.

Now they warn us to be prepared for higher prices on canned vegetables this winter because the general crop will not average more than half the normal production. Somehow, the public is coming to expect this sort of thing. The real shock will come when finally something or other of the necessities takes a price turn in the other direction to a degree that the purchaser can appreciate when he buys it.

Fort Wayne's death rate for June was 10.7 according to the report of the state board of health. The figures for Indianapolis were 15.1; for Evansville, 15; for Terre Haute, 12.2. Make your own selection of the healthiest city in which to live.

In a series of flying squadron roundups on Sunday, Indianapolis police made a total of 165 arrests on gambling and liquor-selling charges. The result makes it apparent that the lid in the capital city is in need of a bit finer adjustment before it can be considered dependably air-tight.

It is evident that those Lakeside people have reached the conclusion that if Fort Wayne is to have flood prevention, it is up to them to keep the project from a lingering but none the less certain death.

PRAISE FOR WILSON.

(Baltimore Sun.)

We do not wish to "crow over" the old school of diplomacy, but it will surely learn a lesson from the Washington schoolmaster. Its mistakes were natural from its point of view, which is the old point of view and the worldly point of view. Its disciples failed to see that there was another and a wiser and better viewpoint. They failed to appreciate the fact that it pays quite as well in international affairs as in individual affairs to consider the moral side of questions. And they failed, finally, to realize the true conditions in Mexico and to see that only such a policy as the president's offered the hope of a permanent cure for a situation which it was to the interest of Europe as well as the United States to bring to an end.

Though Mexico is not yet out of her troubles, Mr. Wilson has helped her forward mightily by peaceful means on the road toward permanent liberation and stable government. And every step which she takes in that direction will be as much for the benefit of other countries as for her own. Thus the policy which the old-fashioned builders of nations rejected promises to become the head of the corner with constructive statement of the future, and the desired diplomatic amateur has rendered a double service to Mexico and the world the establishment of a standard of peaceful diplomacy which conserving and practical interests makes duty and obligation the first principle of the international code.

(Pittsburg Dispatch.)

An Elizabeth, (N. J.) judge suspended sentence upon a young man of that town, charged with drunkenness, with the admonition: "You drink too much, young man, and you need a wife to take care of you. If you're not married in thirty days I'll have you brought back here." Indignant protest has followed from women who point out that the judge is really sentencing the woman at the same time if the young man finds one willing to take the risk of trying to reform him by marriage.

Belief in the reformatory effect of matrimony is not so general or so confident as it once was. It is admitted that there have been cases where it worked, but it is argued that the proportion is so small as to be insignificant compared to the number where it failed. Also, as some of this Jersey judge's women critics point out, women are paying more attention to the risks of matrimony, looking more carefully to the character of prospective husbands and consequently are less inclined to sacrifice themselves in the chance of reforming some man who may be beyond reforming. Others may figure that if a man can not be reformed before marriage there is little hope of his being reformed afterwards. If the woman he desires to marry has not sufficient influence to reform him before she weds him it is problematical whether she ever will have.

Aside from the anticipated and poetically obsolete theory which this Jersey jurist prescribed, it may be asked by what authority he undertook to impose such a condition. There are too many judges, mostly in the police and other minor courts, who attempt the Solomonic role and only make themselves ridiculous. This might not matter, but they make the administration of law ridiculous at the same time. Some sort of recall for such "judges" is urgently needed.

PARIS CINDERELLS WEDS OIL KING.

CHARLES VICTOR HALL AND HIS PARISIAN BRIDE.

Los Angeles, July 21.—Two years ago Rita Soutan, with face as fair as the flowers she sold, stood on the streets of Paris and smilingly offered a nosegay for a few centimes to Charles Victor Hall, millionaire oil king of California.

Following her adoption by Hall and the subsequent divorce of his wife, a romantic sentiment between the petite flower girl and her elderly guardian culminated in marriage.

Returning recently with her husband to the land where he made his fortune, the Parisian Cinderella dazzled the Angeline "400" with one of the most marvelous trousseaus ever displayed on two continents.

So "extreme" are many of the costly French gowns of Mrs. Hall that she has given up trying to wear them in public. Even in Paris they attracted decided attention, Mrs. Hall admits.

"I wear them now simply for my husband," she says with twinkling eyes. "One night in Paris on returning from the theater we were surrounded by a throng of people curious to see my clothes. The traffic was blocked for several minutes—and that was in Paris, too!"

Mrs. Hall admits with a pout that she will be compelled to modify her toilette for the more sober taste of the west. Nevertheless she is too truly a child of Paris to be happy in ordinary clothes. They must all be "creations."

Fashion rules made for herself by Mrs. Charles Victor Hall, French bride of California oil magnate:

She will never wear the same hat twice.

She will not appear in any of her Parisian trousseau gowns in the west without modifying them.

Will never buy a gown elsewhere than in Paris, and will do most of her shopping by cablegram.

Her shopping will be done via cablegram to Paris, where, in her "pet" establishment specially trained milliners and tailors will supply her needs at short notice.

In case she should be dissastisfied even then, Mrs. Hall will personally alter the importations, for she is deft with the needle and has for just such contingencies a wonderful collection of rare laces collected in Brussels.

She wears a hat but a single time.

"I do not wish to set new styles in Los Angeles," she said. "I wear pretty clothes simply because I am a woman—because I love them. They are only for my husband's pleasure and my own. I happen to like Parisian gowns best, so I will never wear any others."

WILSON TO VISIT CHICAGO.

President Likely to Attend Reserve Bank Conference Here.

Washington, July 21.—President Wilson has not yet replied to the invitation of the Illinois Bankers' association to attend the national conference on the federal reserve act, beginning September 1, but that he will accept was indicated by a letter he sent to a senator today. Explaining his inability to come to the senator's state at that time, the president said he would be in Chicago and the middle west. He will deliver addresses on the achievements of the administration.

GARY RIVER CHANGE O. K.

Council Approves Removal of Grand Calumet for Steel Mills.

Gary, Ind., July 21.—The Gary council last night approved the action of the Indiana Steel and Gary Land companies in changing the course of the Grand Calumet river so that the steel work could be built. This river was moved 1,000 feet and the channel straightened. A similar bill asking for federal approval now is before congress.

Took Life in Hands for a Desperate Start and Lands in Cell.

"I was homesick and I wanted to get back to Angola and mother's boarding house awful bad. That's the only reason I know."

Ross Chard, young, tall, thin, swarthy and clad in blue overalls, was explaining in the city court to Judge Kerr why, after Officer Bert Smith had picked him from the street, found him a lodging place for the night at no cost to himself he had made a desperate escape from the hostelry, shinned down a fire escape to the street and taken to his heels. Officer Smith found Chard sitting weary and forlorn at the entrance of the Transfer saloon on West Main street, about 9:30 Monday night. The fellow told a good story of quitting work on a farm north of Fort Wayne and wanting to get to Garrett and thence home to Angola. He was taken to the interurban terminal, where it was developed he had no money to pay his fare. The officer took him to a Pearl street lodging house and paid for his bed. Chard retired and in the silent watches of the night made a perilous journey from the window of his room over some wires to the fire escape and thence to the ground. Later, he fell in with a couple of hoboes and Officer Smith landed the whole trio for loitering. Judge Kerr let Chard hike for Angola, and George Pallace and John Wike, his companions in the pinch, were given permission to start for Baltimore, where they said they wanted to be put off.

Made War on Officer.

Jim Donovan wore some cubist presentments on his once fair countenance and it was explained by himself that the ornamentations ensued from a lively conflict with Officer Bert Smith when the minion of the law tried to boost him into the patrol wagon. He was drunk, had been tossed out of a mission house for creating a disturbance and was in general having a bad-man time when he was pinched. He went over for fifteen days.

Officer Smith also had the pleasure of listening to George Kelly's opinion of policemen when he pinched Kelly for being drunk and begging on the street. Kelly has a phony crippled arm and he has been turning it to cash account about the streets. Fifteen days were wished on him by the court and he went over feeling sore about it.

Other City Court Cases.

Clint O'Brien, a shambling and unkempt vag, was given $5 and costs and Tom Till, an aged loiterer claiming to hail from Hillsdale, Mich., who said he came down here with the idea of getting into a hospital, was directed to the township trustees for help.

Doit Johnson, who comes in from Van Wert occasionally to refresh himself in a manner forbidden by law in his home town, drifted in again Monday, was pinched and will spend eleven days in jail.

"Whisky Bill" Dodacker was given eleven days in which to get sober, though he denied he was drunk.

George Krock, no stranger in the city court, was charged with disorderly conduct and his wife was present as a witness. His case was continued until the 24th and he went to jail in default of $100 bond.

William Bedford, a pie merchant, testified that as he was going past a liquor store at the northeast corner of Main and Harrison streets, William Butts, colored porter, first tripped him with a sprinkling hose and then threatened him with a knife when Bedford protested. There were no other witnesses save the complainant and the defendant. Butts strenuously denied the charge of assault and battery and said he had never before seen his accuser. Judge Kerr took the case under advisement until Wednesday morning.

Charles Auer was the name given by a man who got into trouble on Baker street near the Centlivre hotel, was kicked and severely injured, booked for drunkenness and removed to St. Joseph hospital by order of Police Surgeon J. Frank Dinnen. He was unable to appear for trial and the case was postponed.

The case against Emma Williams and Tessie Jones, negresses charged with trimming August Schultz of $195 in an alley job, were continued until Friday morning, the state not being yet ready to go to trial with the grand larceny charges.

William Beber, manager of Clemens restaurant at 606 Calhoun street, paid a fine of $1 and costs for assault and battery on a waiter named David Stein, who refused to perform some labor in the way directed by the manager. The complaining witness was not injured save in his feelings.

Elmer West, a loiterer held for several days for investigation, was turned loose. He was trying to sell some automobile tools when arrested.

Arry Carry, Hanna street and Masterson avenue, and George Cusha, Holman and Lafayette streets, were charged with Sabbath desecration in affidavits filed by George Harrod. It is alleged they kept their stores open on Sunday. The hearing of the cases was postponed.

YOUNG WIFE HELD FOR FORGERY

Mrs. May Clinton, aged 20 years, and residing at 924 Clinton street, has been put under a recognizance bond for appearance in the circuit court on a charge of forgery. She was given a hearing in the city court Monday afternoon. Mrs. Clinton strenuously and persistently denied her guilt, but the evidence was conclusive. A week ago she telephoned the "juvenile shop" of Miss Gerow, on East Wayne street, that she wanted a number of infant's garments sent for approval to the home of Mrs. Catherine Sommers, 122 East Washington street and would send a boy for them, which she did. The boy returned with such of the garments as were not wanted and a check for $10, from which $3.25 was taken pay for the kept apparel and $6.75 in change was returned. The check was found to be worthless and Detective Joseph Brennan was put on the case. He found the boy, who identified the woman to the detective and Miss Gerow went to Mrs. Clinton's home and found the garments that had been kept. Mrs. Clinton's signature is in writing identical with that on the check, as is a check for $4 taken by the Lichtsinn & Peters grocery, on East Wayne street, made payable to and endorsed by "Mrs. Oeilig" and signed "Mrs. Gates Horton." Mrs. Clinton is a daughter of the late Sam Miner, well known in sporting circles in Fort Wayne a few years ago.

Julius Schoumann, of Decatur, who has been ill for several weeks and a patient at the Lutheran hospital is now on the road to recovery. His condition is improving rapidly.

TO RELIEVE TRAFFIC CONGESTION.

Commercial Club Directors Discuss Conditions on Calhoun Street.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Fort Wayne Commercial club Monday night, the members discussed congested conditions of traffic on Calhoun street and the club's committee on streets and boulevards was instructed to ask the city administration to improve Clinton street so that thoroughfare can bear a portion of the heavy travel to the railroads. William H. Scheimann is chairman of this committee. The following membership applications were acted upon favorably: E. W. Shryock, Henry E. Berghoff, P. Dessauer, William H. Knapp, Ralph J. Thieme, E. N. Andem, Henry K. Kaiser, C. M. Mason and H. C. Underwood.

Her Little Joke May Cost Millions.

London, Eng., July 20.—Just because Mrs. Waldorf Astor, jr., made a jocular remark concerning the tightened strings of her father-in-law's money bags, the elder Astor, who is an expatriated American seeking a dukedom, threatens to disinherit her husband. Mrs. Astor was one of the four beautiful Langhorns, made famous by the Charles Dana Gibson drawings.

Would You Love to Have a Pleasing Personality? Certainly. Well Then---

Beverly Bane Will Tell You in The Sentinel Just How It is Done—"Every Woman Can Use the Fine Art of Pantomime," Declares Noted "Movie" Star.

BEVERLY BAYNE SAYS: "A Woman Must Not Only Have Grace, But Graciousness, if She Would Be Called Beautiful."

BEVERLY BAYNE, WHO IS LEADING LADY IN THE CHICAGO STUDIOS OF THE ESSANA COMPANY.

(Written for The Sentinel.)

After writing, "All women long for beauty" some thousand times, I find I have been unconsciously telling an untruth.

I have learned that women do not long for beauty, but for the power to please—and I have learned it from the "movies."

Women care little for that kind of beauty that appeals to the eye only—that kind of beauty seldom lasts. What woman wants is to be pleasing all her life long, and to do this Beverly Bayne says she must not only have grace, but graciousness.

Having these she need not worry because her lips do not form a Cupid's bow if she parts them in smiles of cheerfulness and sympathy.

Of the color of her eyes she need not be particular if those same "windows of the soul" show it to be pure and sweet.

Even her complexion—that bugbear of all those who subscribe to the old beauty cult—may boast of a freckle or two and still she may be the most popular woman in her set. Youth is not necessary to make one universally pleasing. Indeed, most of the women who have put their names, as beauties, on the scroll of time have been past their first youth.

Beauty as we know it is not a question of form, complexion, eyes, nose, mouth or any other physical attribute of the human family.

Take Lillian Russell for example: Because she is universally acclaimed "most beautiful." There are thousands of women today who have as fine a skin and coloring as this professional beauty.

You must please before you open your mouth—you must make your inner self so overshadow all the imperfections that may belong to your other self.

And how will you do it?

Watch the girls on the "movie" screen.

All the "movie" stars are not physically beautiful, and the camera is not kind to even the loveliest of them.

It catches the expression of the slightest emotion. It photographs emotions and thoughts of which even the subjects who pass before its all-seeing eye are not conscious.

It depicts personality to the minutest detail.

With this idea in mind, I have asked Miss Beverly Bayne, of the Essanay Film company, the society actress who has been acclaimed by Mr. Francis Bushman, "the most popular movie heroine," "the girl with the sweetest personality in the movies," to help me tell how to acquire and cultivate this one thing which makes an ugly woman beautiful and the lack of which makes beautiful women ugly.

She has also especially posed for the pictures that will illustrate these stories.

CAROLINE COE TELLS HOW TO DO THE SUMMER CANNING.

By (Caroline Coe.)

Make use of all the vegetables that grow in your garden. Don't think you must have them by the basket. Put up a can of beans today, peas tomorrow and so on. You will be surprised how little time it has taken and how great the result.

Any vegetable to be canned must be absolutely fresh. If it seems wilted or at all decayed do not waste time, fire, jars and patience putting it up, for it will not keep.

Corn, if gathered fresh and at once canned, is one of the best of vegetables, although many claim the home-made articles is very difficult "to keep" without a preservative. This is not true. Vegetables, taken care of in a cleanly way according to the recipes given below, will "keep" perfectly.

If a few vegetables only are at hand use a kettle to cook them in, in place of the boiler. When canning a great many, do not put the jars on the bottom of the kettle or boiler, as they will break. A strip of wire gauze cut to fit, a little straw or strips of wood can be used to keep the cans off the bottom.

Cauliflower.

MRS. COE PHOTOGRAPHED IN HER OWN KITCHEN.

Trim cauliflower and allow to stand in salt water half an hour. Pull flowers apart; place in boiling salt water and cook until tender, not soft. Cool with running water. Pack in jars, being careful not to fill so full as to crush the shape of the flowers. To one quart of cold water add one teaspoon of salt. Boil and allow to cool. Fill jars. Put on rubber and top tightly. Put in boiler on rack with cold water to depth of half the can.

Put cover on boiler, bring slowly to boiling point and let boil two hours. Lift out cans. See that covers are perfectly tight.

Tomatoes and Corn.

Boil corn on the cob twenty minutes. Cut off while hot; have tomatoes skinned and rubbed through sieve to smooth pulp. To each quart of corn add two quarts of tomatoes. Salt to taste. Boil hard five minutes. Seal quickly. Be sure tops are perfectly tight. It is a good plan to turn paraffine around where top and rubber meet.

Canned Pumpkin.

Scrape out seeds and cut in half. Put in oven and bake until all the pulp may be scraped from the skin. Mash with potato masher. To each quart of pumpkin add a teaspoon of salt and a half teaspoon of ginger. Heat to boiling and can while hot.

When ready to use open can and turn pumpkin out on platter for an hour or so before using.

Canned Corn.

The simplest way to can corn is to cut corn from cob, not too closely, and scrape cob well to get all the juice.

To five quarts of the corn add one pint of table salt. Put in large granite kettle and boil one and one-half hours. Have tin cans piping hot.

Do not allow corn to stop boiling. Fill cans to top. Force on cover and turn hot rosin or sealing wax around edge of cover. Cover cans with a heavy blanket to allow to cool slowly. When ready to serve rinse once in clear, cold water, drain head up and season to taste.

Canned Peas.

Shell peas and pack closely in cans. Add to each quart one teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of sugar dissolved in a little water. Fill jars with water. Put on covers, set jars in boiler on rack and fill boiler with water enough to come up three or four inches on jars and boil three hours. Put in boiling water if needed to keep water three or four inches deep. After boiling three hours fasten tops and rubbers. Seal tightly. Cool slowly in boiler.

Canned Beats.

Use small sweet beets. Boil until tender and skin. Pack jars with beets and fill to top with water salted in proportion of one teaspoon of salt to each quart and half cup of vinegar.

Adjust tops to cans and place in boiler on rack and boil forty-five minutes. When slightly cool run beeswax around edge of cover.

Carrots may be canned in this way.

Lima Beans.

Shell beans, pack in cans with one teaspoon of salt to each quart of beans, fill can with clear cold water and proceed same as for peas.

String Beans.

Cut off both ends of beans, string carefully and cut into any desired size. Boil in water with salt in proportion of one teaspoon to each quart of water. When boiling thoroughly drain and again pour salt water in same proportion and cook until tender but not soft.

Pack beans in sterilized jars. Fill with boiling water in which they were boiled. Put two rubbers in jar. Screw on tops and screw down tight. Put in dark paper bag and store for winter.

Tomatoes.

Select tomatoes of even size and not too large to go into the cans without cutting. The bright red variety look prettiest. Scald tomatoes by dipping into boiling water. Remove, peel and put in large preserving kettle. When bottom of kettle is covered add (for twenty tomatoes) one even tablespoon each of salt and sugar.

Boil thirty minutes without stirring. Take up each tomato and carefully put in can until can is full. Turn over enough juice to fill can to top. Adjust rubber and top. Screw as tight as possible and wrap in dark paper bag.

NEW DEVICE FOR THE NECK.

The radical changes in the matter of our coiffure have had their effect not only on the shape and style of the hats that are to be worn during the season, but in the important region of our necks. Happily these are still to be left bare—a pretty and hygienic fashion that we are glad to be allowed to cling to. The nape of the neck especially is such a pretty part of the feminine anatomy that any device for displaying it and exploiting its charms is to be welcomed. The arrangement of the hair on the top of the head has been an advantage to all pretty necks, and it has been decreed further by the powers that order these things that even the high Medici collar that threatened concealment of the back of the neck is to be joined to corsages cut very low at the back, and to stand well out from it. All collars, in fact, have a tendency to curve outward and backward so as to leave the neck as visible and untrammelled as possible. The Medici collars are made in tulle, chiffon or lace in an endless variety of becoming shapes, and wired tightly but firmly with featherbone to give them just the "stand-upness" that is necessary to their success. Other collars of the flat persuasion meant for wearing with tailor-mades are in fine white lawn or voile and hemstitched.

Carpenter aprons at the Patterson-Fletcher store.

NEW GARTERS.

Lace is now so much the vogue that it is used as a trimming on all kinds of feminine accessories and dainty necessities. A very pleasing pair of garters made in the latest mode have the lace covering. The elastic is first covered with pink satin ribbon and over this a piece of lace insertion is applied. The insertion is as long as the ribbon, so that it will give with it and wide enough to form a frill along both edges of garter. The lace is, of course, just put on the outside of the covered elastic. The garters are then decorated with a smart bow of narrow picot edged blue ribbon or with a bunch of small roses and forget-me-nots. A pair of these garters would make a most attractive gift for a bridal trousseau.

SICK PLANTS NURSED BY UNCLE SAM'S HIGH-SALARIED "PLANT DOCTOR."

Washington, D. C., July 20.—Coddling sick grape vines and nursing ailing blackberry bushes is the every day occupation of Mrs. Flora Wambaugh Patterson, one of the highest salaried women in the employment of the United States government.

In the national bureau of plant industry Mrs. Patterson is known as "chief of the department of pathological exchange," which in plain English means that all plants and shrubs imported into the United States must be examined by Mrs. Patterson and her assistants before they are distributed to the farmers and the gardeners throughout the country.

This woman scientist stands as a shield between the American farmer and the plant disease germs of Europe.

It's Mrs. Patterson's business to bar from this country any plant affected by fungus disease or any infection that might be disastrous to the agricultural interests of the country.

Each shipment of blackberry bushes grape vines or mushrooms is carefully inspected. If a tendency to disease is discovered, the affected plants are sent into quarantine, just like sick folks, and they are kept in their beds of straw and sand until government experts decide whether they are really sick or just wilted. If they have a disease that would make them dangerous to crops and other vegetation they are destroyed in a bonfire. If the government scientists can cure them they are released for distribution.

START DOUBLES IN TENNIS PLAY

Local Cracks Put Up Hard Battle With Indianpolis Experts.

Tuesday morning's play in the annual Northern Indiana tennis tournament on the Country club courts reached the men's doubles and announcement was made by the committee on entries that play would begin late in the afternoon in women's singles. Charles Trask, of Indianapolis, who was the feature of the opening day of the tournament, did not play Tuesday morning, but some exciting tennis was shown in the doubles between Hendricks and Techantine of Indianapolis and Gawehn and Riggin, of Fort Wayne.

This go was the last match of the morning schedule and the play ended with the score for the two sets standing at 6-4, 6-4 in favor of the Indianapolis racquet cracks. The Fort Wayne men made a splendid showing and as during the first day's play, both Riggin and Gawehn showed exceptional form, playing both sets hard until the last and those who witnessed the match were unable for a time to even estimate the outcome of the matches. Techantine playing close to the net in turn slammed across some of the swiftest balls of the tournament thus far, while each of the four gained repeated points in serving.

The Scores.

Scores made during the morning were as follows:

Singles.

Henry Wick defeated Edward Miller, 6-0, 6-1.

T. G. Scheid defeated Morris Seelberg, 6-0, 6-4.

Jack Eaglesfield defeated Lewis Ewing, 6-0, 6-1.

G. Gooder defeated Trafford Wilson, 6-2, 6-3.

Doubles.

Bond and Fisher defeated Lipkey and Guild, 6-4, 6-1.

MacKrell and Thomas defeated Miller and Miller, 6-2, 6-0.

Public is Invited.

The tennis committee of the Country club and the committees in charge of the tournament wish it understood that the public is cordially invited to visit the courts and witness all the matches of the tournament. The play is to continue during the remainder of the week and some exciting and sensational playing is anticipated during the latter part of the week.

The crowd of spectators witnessing the second day's games lined on all sides of the courts and noted among those present were many from out of the city.

First Day's Results.

Gordon E. Riggin won from J. J. Miller, 6-1; 6-0.

Charles Trask won from Gordon E. Riggin, 6-0; 6-1.

Norman Olds won from E. Hulbert Ginn by default.

Norman Olds won from Frank Hawkins, 6-2; 6-0.

Thomas Hendricks won from John C. Hoffman, 6-3;6-3.

James Porter won from Beckenstein by default.

Leslie Gooder won from John Schweiters, 6-2;6-2.

J. Ewing Bond won from W. F. Miller, 6-1;6-3.

Frank Techantine won from E. J. Gawehn, 6-1; 6-1.

Ed Dochterman won from Elmer Weil, 6-4;6-4.

George Cullen Thomas won from Hal Y. Rehrer, 6-1; 6-2.

Joseph A. Barghoff won from George Fishering, 6-0; 6-1.

A. L. Andrews won from G. A. Moore, 6-2; 6-3.

Delegates at Detroit Pave Way for Union of Orders.

Detroit, Mich., July 21.—By unanimous vote, delegates representing the Knights of Maccabees in every state and the Canadian provinces, voted here yesterday in favor of amalgamation of the order with the Knights of the Modern Maccabees. The latter organization ratified the proposed amalgamation at a meeting in Bay City a few weeks ago. The new organization will be known as "The Maccabees." Detroit will be the headquarters for the world, it was announced. It was stated that there would be no unusual change in the rates or by-laws of either society.

MAYOR ROBERTS PAYS FINE.

Indianapolis, July 21.—Attorneys for Donn M. Roberts, mayor of Terre Haute, have paid into the federal court $158.80, the amount ofthe fine and costs in the recent contempt case. Roberts interfered with the cleaning of a sewer in Terre Haute after the work had been ordered done by Federal Judge Anderson.

And Its Companions

Sixty-two years ago advertising was very different from what it is today. Merchants advertised, to be sure, but not in the lively manner they do today. For example, we print here a reproduction of the first advertisement ever run for this business. This very same advertisement ran for many months in the same location of the paper without a word of change.

From a "Fort Wayne Times" of 1852.

Other ads appearing in this old paper are interesting today. There is the advertisement of a book store, announcing the new arrival of more copies of "Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's new and thrilling story entitled Uncle Tom's Cabin." The paper is full of lottery advertisements that would get our present postal officials jumping in a minute. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was advertised that long ago, and there appear such familiar names as Bass & Emrick, grocers. The legal lights who advertised 62 years ago were Worden & Hoagland, L. M. Ninde and Colerick & Withers.

The news columns, hard as they were to read, have much of interest to present-day readers. The Times was glad to note that there would be a railroad convention at Warsaw, which was to take steps to secure the completion of the Pennsylvania and Ohio railroad, to run via Fort Wayne, Warsaw, Plymouth, Laporte and Valparaiso.

Conditions in Mexico were reported as deplorable. Government officials were starving to death at Durango because they could not collect their salaries.

A letter from the representative in congress which took over two weeks to get to Fort Wayne was "fearful that the time of adjournment will be changed to a later date."

There was then on an agitation for a protective tariff, and the "infant industries" of America were receiving their first attention from political parties.

These were the companions of our first advertisement. How different, and how similar, things are today can be judged from the reading of this paper and this advertisement.

A personal invitation for You

Meyer's to Attend the Price Festivities Given in Connection With Our

62nd Anniversary

It's Our Treat and We Offer You a Glorious Week of Closely Cropped Prices

All Thought of Profit Is Cast Aside In Commemoration of Our Long Life. We want All to Join Us In This Celebration.

¶ Sixty-two years ago there was established in the town of Fort Wayne a "New Drug Store" which was destined to become the largest institution of its kind in the state. Quality of goods, low prices and efficient service have caused this business to grow from one store to four, besides establishing a big drug store at Anderson, Ind., the smallest of which now does a bigger business than the original store a number of years ago. All this week we celebrate our birth and our growth. This Anniversary Sale is truly a birthday party. Come at whatever hour you can.

FIND BAD PLACES IN INTERCEPTER

Ambrose Geary, sewer repair superintendent for the city, accompanied by an employe of the department, made an inspection of about 600 feet of the intercepting sewer between the Walda foundry and Walton avenue, Tuesday morning, and found a place where the arch has been compressed from above until it is believed to be in danger of giving way. So low was the arch depressed that it was necessary for the inspectors to almost crawl under it. It is believed that it will be necessary to definitely locate the place and sink a shaft from the surface of the ground in order to make repairs. With electric searchlights the men examined the walls of the sewer's interior and found other places that show the work was not well done.

Mayor Hosey stated Tuesday that so far as he has been able to determine the masonry of the sewer consists of but two courses of brick instead of three as required by the contract. Certainly that part of the sewer exposed by the repair work on the big break below Erie street at Howard, consists of but two courses. The mayor is wondering how much of the sewer was skimped in that way by the contractor. He says it ought to be possible for the city to sue the contractor on his bond for that kind of work, but doubts if it is possible.

Another shortcoming is the absence of manholes at definite intervals. For eighteen hundred feet along the eastern part of the sewer there are no manholes, according to the mayor, and he says that east of the Spy Run avenue bridge several manholes have disappeared.

Masons are at work closing up the breach in the sewer arch at Howard street and as soon as that is done the tremendous task of cleaning the big drain, which seems to be more or less clogged fo rits entire length, will be started. It will be a long and costly job, but it must be done and the board of works will bend its efforts to accomplish the work at the earliest possible day that the sewer may be put in condition to perform its work.

TESTING QUALITY OF GAS.

Expert from State Utilities Commission Visits Fort Wayne.

Russell N. Gavit, meter inspector and gas expert for the Indiana public service commission, is in Fort Wayne making a test of the quality of gas furnished consumers by the Indiana Lighting company. Mr. Gavit set up his apparatus, which is quite elaborate, in the laboratory of the city health department, and made his tests there. The gas is tested for its heat units. The readings of the tests will be calculated by Mr. Gavit and the results forwarded as a report to the utilities commission. If the gas is shown to be below the approved standard the gas company will be notified that the quality of its product must be raised. The result of the test will be made known in a few days, it is expected.

REARRANGE HEALTH WORK.

One Inspector Will Give Attention to Quarantine Duties.

A plan for rearranging the work of the sanitary officers of the health department has been worked out by President H. O. Bruggeman and Secretary J. H. Gilpin. One inspector will be assigned exclusively to contagious disease and quarantine work and the other officers will be put on inspection work for the balance of the heated term to look after garbage, vaults, alleys and back yards. It is believed that in this way greater efficiency can be obtained than by dividing the work of different kinds among all of them. At this season complaints are numerous and furnish enough work for two officers. Meat and Milk Inspector E. A. Schott, who has just returned from his vacation, and Deputy Inspector Charles Josse will devote their time to meat, milk, restaurant, grocery and meat market inspection.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT BUDGET.

The health department is, as usual, the first to complete its budget for the ensuing year. The last budget asked for the following: Sanitary police, $2,460; meat and dairy inspection, $2,640; salaries of board, $2,580; contagious disease prevention, $2,000 incidentals, $225. This year's budget will be the same, except that $720 additional will be asked for one more sanitary officer and $360 will be asked for the incidental account.

FIND ANOTHER INFECTED RAT.

No New Cases of Bubonic Plague Reported at New Orleans.

New Orleans, July 21.—A rat captured at the Dumaine street wharf was infected with bubonic plague, according to announcement today by Dr. W. C. Ricker, assistant surgeon general in charge of the plague fight. This is the sixth infected rat captured.

No new cases had been reported up to this afternoon, and with one exception those at the isolation hospital were improving rapidly.

The condition of Helen Soell, 10, who developed the disease last week, still was considered dangerous.

New Head of Police in Chicago District Ruled by Hinky Dink.

Chicago, July 21. A cleaning out such as the old south side levee has never known, was promised today with the advent of Captain Max Nootbar, as the commanding police officer in that quarter in the place of Captain Ryan, transferred. That Captain Nootbar's efforts might be thwarted by aldermanic influence credited to the councilmen from the First ward, Michael (Hinky Dink) Kenna and John (Bathhouse) Coughlan, received little attention from the new police captain. "I don't know anyone who can give me orders but Chief Gleason," said Nootbar.

While the new broom was preparing to sweep the ill-favored quarter the chief of police and other officers attended the funeral of Detective Sergeant Stanley J. Birns, the victim of a shooting affray in Twenty-second street Thursday night when many revolver shots were exchanged between two policemen and two specially detailed members of the morals squad. Investigation of the causes of the fatal shooting were continued today by the civil service commission, the police and the states attorney. James Colisimo, one of the southside levee powers, was taken into custody by the police. He would not talk.

The prosecutor contends that there was a plot to attack the members of the morals squad and that the conflict between the two groups of policemen threw the plan awry.

Gunman Was Imported.

States Attorney Hoyne today asserted that Rocco Venille, accused of starting the shooting which led to the death of Detective Birns, was a New York gunman who had been sent here after the electrocution of the murderers of Herman Rosenthal.

Hoyne asserted he had evidence that he was sent to Chicago to aid in a plot to put W. C. Dannenberg, police inspector of morals, and the men on his staff out of the way so that vice in Chicago would not be interfered with, Hoyne continued:

"Venille came to Chicago as an employe of the men who are 'masters of commercialized vice in this country, for the purpose of killing Dannenberg and his men. He came here to organize a select gang of gunmen of which he was to be the leader.

"Venille fired the first shot last Thursday night and he was wounded in one toe of the right foot. He was hurried to St. Anthony's hospital and gave his name as Frank Landan, a brick layer. He said a stray bullet deflected by a wall struck him. We kept watch of him and found that he was taken to another hospital where we have him under surveillance."

IS EXPELLD FROM GARY.

Mike the Pike Was Held as a Secret Prisoner by the Police.

Gary, Ind., July 21.—Mike the Pike Heitler, whose arrest followed those of twenty-seven inmates of resorts here, was released from jail after being held as a secret prisoner by the Gary police. He was expelled from the city. Several of the resort inmates are in jail as a result of their bond being raised to $150 from $50. Mike the Pike is well known in the Gary and Chicago underworld and is known as overlord of the Chicago "red light" and gambling resorts.

ADVENTURES OF JOHNNY MOUSE.

Chas. S. Bash and Others Make New Move in Little River Ditch.

Huntington, Ind., July 21. An error in transcribing stenographer's notes of seemingly little importance may change fate of the now famous Little river ditch which is opposed by residents of the far eastern part of Huntington county and the western section of Allen county. A decision favoring the construction of the ditch, was given in the circuit court about three years ago. Later the case was appealed to supreme court of Indiana.

A suit to bring about a change in the records concerning the trial of the ditch case was filed in circuit court Monday afternoon by attorneys for Charles S. Bash and others, who oppose the construction of the ditch. The case was appealed from the Huntington court by Mr. Bash and other residents of Allen and Huntington counties.

In the complaint it is charged that John Etzold, Huntington court reporter, erred when he typewrote the testimony given in the trial. According to the complaint, figures as to the cost of the drain were not transcribed correctly.

It is said if the allegations of the appellants prove true, the ruling of the supreme court as to the fate of the ditch will be influenced to a great degree.

Many rural residents of the eastern part of Huntington county signed the petition for the construction of the Little river ditch. The ditch controversy has created much interest and its trial proved one of intense interest, the court room being filled by residents of the proposed ditch territory.

Daniel W. Zintsmaster and others were named defendants in the suit filed in the Huntington court Monday afternoon.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS NEAR

Representative Rauch, of Marion, Sees Closing by August 25.

Indianapolis, July 21.—Congressman George Rauch, of the Eleventh Indiana district, brought to Indianapolis today the most cheerful news that has emanated from Washington in many a day. He said:

"I am quite sure that the congress will adjourn on or before August 25." He did not say why he was sure of it, but he talked as if he knew what he was talking about.

"I do not believe it will take long to finish up the anti-trust legislation," he said. "When the bills are finally passed and sent to the president they will be in such shape as will be satisfactory to the administration and everybody else."

Mr. Rauch said his visit to Indianapolis had no political significance "merely a little personal business," he said.

REFUGEES STILL HELD UP.

Puerto, Mexico, July 21.—Another delay has occurred in the departure of Mexican refugees from this port. The steamship Mexico, it is announced, is not coming here and this apparently leaves as the next opportunity the Buenos Ayres on Thursday. That vessel does not touch at Jamaica, unless by special provision, but does call at Vera Cruz, an incident that may be distasteful to most of the Mexicans marooned here. Practically all of them are still aboard the British cruiser Bristol as they are too nervous to step ashore. All the troops who came here from Mexico City have left and everything is quiet.

LAST BILL OF PROGRAM.

Railroad Securities Measure Ready to Go to the Senate.

Washington, July 21.—Chairman Newlands, of the senate interstate commerce committee, said today that the last of the administration anti-trust program, the railroad securities bill, would be perfected and ready tomorrow for submission to the senate with the Calyton bill. As now agreed upon the bill would give the interstate commerce commission authority over the issuance of all securities by common carriers, with power to investigate proposed improvements for which funds are sought to approve issues if deemed necessary or advantageous. The commission also would be given power to go into court to enjoin a bond issue if made in violation of its order. Electric railroads, unless they constitute a part of the railroad system, would be exempted.

DESERTED 20 TIMES, SHE SAYS.

Columbus Woman Sues for Divorce, Not for Desertion, But for Cruelty.

Columbus, Ind., July 21.—Mrs. Edward Haney has filed suit in the circuit court for divorce and states that her husband deserted her twenty times. However, she does not allege desertion. Instead, she alleges cruel and inhuman treatment declaring that the many desertions constituted such treatment. She declares her husband tore off her clothing, beat her, spat in her face, called her names and failed to provide her with food, clothing or medicine.

CO-OPERATION IS GREATEST NEED

Charles Pierce Says Labor Should Be Given a Responsible Status.

Chicago, July 21.—Need of co-operation of employes with employers was emphasized today in the testimony of Charles Pierce, formerly president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, before the United States commission on industrial relations and conditions. "If the workingmen arbitrarily set a measure of what a day's task shall be," said Mr. Pierce, "our task is hopeless. I must have the co-operation of the men under me."

Restriction of output by the unions was complained of by Mr. Pierce, who gave figures which he said showed the difference in production under union agreements and under unrestricted conditions.

"I consider organization properly conducted the best means for bringing about the best relationship between employers and workmen," said Mr. Pierce.

"The union should be made financially responsible for breaking contracts. No irresponsible body of men should be permitted to commit destructive and dangerous acts. They should be responsible for breaches of agreement. That is essential for collective bargaining. The incorporation of unions should beeffected."

IS SLAIN BY LITTLE BROTHER.

Attica, Ind., July 21.—Ruth, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pugh, of Judyville, died today of a rifle wound accidentally inflicted Saturday by her brother, Ralph, aged eight. The accident occurred at the home of their grandparents, a short distance from their own home. The children found a rifle and were playing with it. After the shooting the girl ran to her own home, where she told her mother, shielding her brother from blame and insisting that it was only an accident.

ARM CRUSHED NEAR SHOULDER

L. C. Layton Missed Hand Bar and Fell Beneath the Wheels.

Lyman C. Layton, a Pennsylvania switchman, displayed remarkable physical endurance and great presence of mind at 3:50 o'clock Monday afternoon, when he alighted from the cab of an engine at the Pennsylvania depot, supporting by his right hand his left arm, which was severed except for a few shreds of flesh and skin a few inches above the elbow, walked down one of the stairs leading from the train sheds to the depot as a stretcher was being taken up the baggage elevator to get him. Reaching the concourse, he passed out of it, got into a taxicab and was driven to St. Joseph hospital, where surgical attention was given him by Dr. C. B. Stemen and Dr. Budd Van Swearingen.

Mr. Layton, who since the reduction of the crews at the yards has been serving as a freight brakeman, went with a switching crew to the industrial track at the Egley-Doan Elevator company in the western part of the city, to handle some cars. He had just closed a switch and ran to the string of cars to get on one of them, when he missed his hold and fell in such manner that the wheels of one pair of trucks passed over his arm, severing it as stated, and bruised his head and body in several places. He arose, walked to the engine and climbed unassisted in the cab, when he sat upright on the fireman's seat, while he was being hurriedly taken to the passenger depot. There an ambulance was awaiting him, but he chose the taxicab, as stated. At the hospital the surgeons amputated the mangled arm near the shoulder and dressed the other wounds and they say that unless complications set in, Mr. Layton will recover.

The injured man was for several years a yard conductor and was among those effected by the reduction of the forces several weeks ago. At that time he assumed the work of yard brakeman and was thus engaged when he received the injuries mentioned. He is married and resides at 1328 Anthony boulevard.

ADDED THREE CREWS.

Freight Movement Over Pennsylvania Shows Increase.

Three firemen have been advanced to extra freight engineers and three freight firemen have been advanced to the passenger service to take the places of the men advanced to engineers on the Pennsylvania, indicating an improvement in the volume of freight moving over the line, though it is not very marked. Grain is beginning to move towards the seaboard and with a slight increase in the movement of other freight, business on the Pennsylvania is moving forward, but the business is far from normal as yet. The passenger firemen advanced to freight engineers yesterday were L. F. Wood, O. R. Leedy and F. W. Brandt and their places at the scoop and pick on passenger engines have been filled by the transfer of D. Shepler, J. R. Beaty and W. E. Spear from the freight service. The three engineers named were among those reduced in rank several months ago.

ALL CARS MUST BE PERFECT.

Pennsy Serves Notice That it Will Not Handle Certain Cars.

The Pennsylvania railroad has notified other railroads that it will no longer accept from lines with which it connects, any passenger cars which do not meet the requirements of the federal safety appliance acts.

To meet the federal requirements for passenger cars, the Pennsylvania railroad has, since the details of the laws were made known in 1911, been adding to its cars the appliances demanded. All cars have now been equipped at a cost of $144,217.

To equip its locomotives and passenger and freight cars with the safety appliances required under the federal laws will, when completed—the company has until July 1st, 1916, to equip its freight cars—cost the Pennsylvania railroad system $5,185,000.

WILL HAVE FOUR DELEGATES.

At the meeting of Friendship lodge, No 79, International Association of Machinists, Monday night, it was decided to send four delegates to the Indiana State Federation meeting in this city in September. These delegates will be elected at the meeting of the union August 3. At the meeting last night friendship lodge initiated six applicants and took action on several other applicants. The lodge is growing and it is estimated that about 65 per cent. of the eligible material in Fort Wayne has been enrolled.

SLIGHT WRECK AT HUGO.

A freight car in westbound local, No. 73, on the Wabash, left the tracks at Hugo this morning and got in such position as to block both tracks at that point. Passenger train No. 28, which appeared at the scene exactly on time, was compelled to wait an hour at Hugo. In the meantime an unusual number of passengers awaited its coming at the depot and were not backward in expressing their displeasure over the incident. The damage to the freight train was confined to the derailed car.

NEW EXECUTIVE BOARD.

E. M. Buchanan, J. O'Connell, M. G. Weidemann, E. C. Daniels, Daniel Long and W. O. Lakey compose the new executive board of the Building Trades council, which held a meeting last night. Other business at the meeting was the inauguration of a movement to organize a bricklayers' and stone masons' union, and with this object in view a meeting will be held next Thursday night.

FOREMAN SZINK RETURNS.

George A. Szink arrived home from Philadelphia last evening, accompanied by Mrs. Szink, and this morning he resumed his duties at the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop. Mr. and Mrs. Szink went to the Quaker City two or three weeks ago to visit their daughter, Mrs. Clarence Hilberry. Mrs. Szink was in poor health at that time, but the journey resulted beneficially and she is now in a fair way to complete recovery.

PART OF ROUND HOUSE FALLS.

About one-third of the frame round house of the Lake Shore collapsed at noon yesterday. The structure was weakened about a week ago by the high winds and has been in a tottering condition since. The employes expected it to fall and none were caught when it collapsed. The building had accommodations for ten engines and had been in service ever since the road was built.

HIS LEFT HAND INJURED.

Machinist Hugh Collis, of the Pennsylvania erecting shop, will be unable to work for a few days. This morning an engine equalizer fell on his left hand, while he was at work, cutting and bruising the member badly. The company surgeon dressed the wound.

ALL STEEL BOX CARS.

The Pennsylvania, which owns one-third of all the steel passenger cars in the United States, has just started to build some all steel box cars of 100,000 pounds capacity, which will cost upwards of $1,500. The present box car, with steel underframe, costs $1,050.

VICTIM OF AUTO ACCIDENT.

L. C. Glissman, of the experimental department of the Fort Wayne Electric works, expects to resume his duties next Thursday. A week ago, while crossing Broadway at Swinney avenue, he was run down by an automobile and had both elbows and one of his knees sprained, skinned and cut.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Machinist Thomas Hayes, of the Wabash shops, will be the guest of friends over Sunday.

A. F. King, assistant trainmaster of the Wabash, is in the city on business for the company.

R. J. Fisher went to Michigan City last night on business for the Bass Foundry & Machine company.

Business for the car department of the Pennsylvania called John A. Allen to Chicago this morning.

Joseph Chapman, J. F. Hille and F. J. Palmer, of the Pennsylvania erecting shop, are sick and off duty.

Machinist J. H. Deck, who was sick a few days, resumed work in the Pennsylvania erecting shop this morning.

After a two weeks' vacation, W. Thielker, a flue setter, reported for work in the Pennsylvania shops this morning.

After a three weeks' illness, Earl Ormison has resumed work in the assemble department at the Electric works.

Machinist H. W. Bente, of the Pennsylvania shops, will leave tomorrow for Sandusky, Ohio, where he will visit a few days.

Tank Repairman Henry Klenke has recovered from an illness which kept him from his work in the Pennsylvania shops a week.

Agent E. H. Kirkland will arrive home tomorrow. He went to Pittsburg several days ago on business for the Pennsylvania company.

Tomorrow Machinist and Mrs. A. E. Stewart will go to Detroit to spend several days with relatives. He is employed in the Pennsylvania shops.

The Lake Shore and the Lake Erie and Western auditors have been here a couple days, checking up the passenger and freight departments.

B. W. Fitch, a clerk in the Pennsylvania trainmaster's office, is at Carp Lake with Anthony Klotz, assistant cashier of the Wabash freight office.

C. E. Haberkorn, Wabash machinist, and his daughter, are preparing for a visit with relatives in Cleveland. They will leave for that city next Thursday.

Michael Laughlin, the retired Pennsylvania passenger engineer, has returned from Southern Illinois, where he spent over a week with friends in the country.

Division Storekeeper E. L. Ensel, of the Wabash, is spending a part of the week on the eastern portion of his territory, at Toledo, Montpelier and St. Thomas.

Clarence Smethers, an apprentice in the Wabash machine shop, will spend a two weeks' vacation in Pittsburg and New York, leaving for the former place Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. V. Lapp have returned from Chicago. They were guests of relatives there over Sunday. Mr. Lapp resumed work in the Pennsylvania shops yesterday.

Foreman O. E. Shaffer, of the east car shops, contemplates a trip to Boston and other eastern points. He will leave in a day or two and will be accompanied by Mrs. Shaffer.

L. D. Nordstrum, of the engineering department of the Fort Wayne Electric works, returned from James lake last night. He has a cottage up there and makes regular week-end trips to it.

One of the steers which broke out of the Pennsylvania stock yards with twenty-nine others Sunday night, is still roaming at will in the eastern part of the county. The others have been captured and are now well on the way to the eastern markets. The escape from the pens of these cattle caused a great deal of trouble to the Pennsylvania men who had charge of them.

He had two of the fingers painfully burned when the oil burner he was attempting to light flared up and the flame enveloped his hand. Nickel Plate Engineer M. C. Schram, of Conneaut, who was paralyzed while at the throttle as his train was entering the yards at Bellevue last September, has recovered and has taken a position as yard engineer at Conneaut. Mr. Schram is well known to all Nickel Plate men running in and out of Bellevue.

Edward Black had an eye badly injured yesterday, when a piece of metal flew up when he struck the chisle he was using and lodged in one of his eyes. The injured man is at St. Joseph hospital, where he is being attended by Dr. J. M. Dimen. The latter says that the eye is badly injured and the sight may be lost. Mr. Black is employed at the car barns of the Northern Indiana Traction company and it was there that the accident happened.

Friday another lot, numbering fifteen children, will be received by the charitable people near Argus and entertained for awhile. GIGANTIC WHEAT CROP SPELLS PROSPERITY FOR NATION.

THE HARVEST REGION.

Map of the wheat region, where scores of railroads, thousands of men, and millions in money are co-operating to harvest Uncle Sam's record crop. On the right, sacks of grain waiting at a siding for the cars, and (above) the congested tracks at a Lake Superior port, where millions of bushels of wheat are transferred from the trains to boats or elevators.

Uncle Sam right now is laying in for fair to the most colossal job of all his life.

He's wheeling in the wheat.

Nine hundred million bushels of it! Seven hundred million dollars' worth—the king of crops!

It will take 750,000 freight cars to move that crop to market—and those cars have got to be found at once, and filled with the grain that a horde of farmers in a dozen states are hauling to the rural shipping points.

That's the reason red-faced men in shirt sleeves along a hundred thousand miles of railroad, are sweating and swearing, and switching thousands of cars onto already overcrowded sidings. That's the reason high officials, of otherwise impeccable honesty, are ruthlessly "swiping" every last car of any old rival road they can victimize—if that car be only "fit for grain." Farmers, bankers, laborers, manufacturers, office clerks—the people of America—are co-operating feverishly to finish up the champion chore of our farming history.

Uncle Sam is not a city man. He's a farmer.

Some of the sons have set up factories in the towns, and now are prattling of their portentous import to prosperity. But Uncle Sam back on the farm only smiles. He knows what port prosperity hails from.

"Just you cotton to th' crops, young man," he says, and ploughs a few more acres. And when it comes to the harvest, he calls on all America to help him—for the sake of their daily bread.

Just at present Uncle Sam is harvesting a pretty considerable crop of wheat—900,000,000 bushels of it, a world record. And every last bushel of it has got to be cared for, moved, marketed, milled, and made into meal. It's America's mightiest job!

An army of harvest hands have begun their laborious march northward over the golden grain fields, leaving behind them a prairie-wide swath of stubble, and immeasurable stacks of grain.

They start in Oklahoma, move northward through Kansas and Nebraska, into Minnesota and the two Dakotas. Banks and manufacturers help them in the reaping, with money and machines.

But the brunt of the business bumps the railroads.

It's up to them to accomplish the actual physical movement of this year's whopping wheat crop. Kansas, Oklahoma, and Nebraska alone will have 253,000,000 bushels to be moved by rail. And no more than 1,200 bushels will go into one car. That means 210,000 cars, or at thirty cars to a train, 7,000 train loads of wheat to be moved in those three states in the next month! That in addition to the regular traffic!

The elevators and mills of Kansas City will absorb some 16 million bushels. Over 26 million bushels will go by rail to Chicago, and thence by boat to the east. Millions more of this great tide of wheat will stream down to Galveston and New Orleans, and east to Baltimore, for export.

Another mighty flood of the grain has its source in the three northern states, the Dakotas and Minnesota, which will produce several hundred million more bushels. Ninety millions of bushels will go to the Twin cities, 50 millions to Duluth. Transhipped to freighters at this and other Lake Superior ports, 110 million bushels will pass the "Soo" canal on the way to eastern mills. Other huge rivers of grain will flow across the border into Canada, and west through the Rockies to Seattle for export. Some will go all the way to New York by rail.

What wonder the railroads stagger, and the train dispatchers swear? There aren't enough carwheels on the rails to move all that flood of grain as fast as the shippers demand.

For over a month the lines have been storing up cars, in preparation for the tremendous strain. Along the hundred thousand miles of track that tap the grain fields, a quarter of a million empty cars are being held on sidings, waiting for the wheat.

But that isn't enough. Every road striving desperately to augment its capacity, is stealing all the cars of rival lines that it can grab!

A car from an eastern railway comes west loaded with merchandise—and isn't returned. The road that holds it must pay the other road owning it 35 cents a day for the use of it—but what—is 35 cents per car, when you can get a fat $80 from the farmer for carrying grain in the same car?

"Hey, send back our car, will you, and get a hump on, too!" calls the eastern railroad.

"All right, certainly, old man," replies the western road. "We're home-routing your car right now. It's on the way."

And the "home route" chosen by the affable official in sending the borrowed car back east is—via Galveston with grain!

The railroads are going to receive about $56,000,000 in freight rates, for transporting the great wheat crop. They can't afford to let single carrier escape them, with the prospects of such profits.

The cars are the vital factors in America's greatest job.

LAKESIDE WANTS CONCRETE DIKES

Civic Improvement Body Has Interesting Special Meeting.

Plans for safeguarding Lakeside property from flood were discussed Monday night at a special meeting of the Lakeside and Forest Park Civic Improvement association and petitions to the board of public works asks that the present dike along Edgewater avenue be strengthened and that a concrete dike be constructed from the Columbia street bridge to Forrest Park avenue along St. Joe boulevard. The petitions were signed by about 100 members of the association and will be placed in circulation immediately for more signatures.

The petition was drafted by Attorney Homer C. Underwood and presented by him. Its provisions were discussed generally by William H. LaHourette, Chairman Frank Singrey, of the board of public works; Councilman Jacob Agne, Lew P. Sharp, William H. Leedy and others.

Mr. LaTourette said he did not believe that the petition should be signed until it was made certain that the rivers could not be dredged first. Henry F. Bullerman declared that Mr. LaTourette did not have the correct idea concerning the proposition, stating that at this time Lakeside has a chance to get the dikes, but no chance to have the rivers dredged. Another meeting of the association is to be held after the petitions have been in circulation a few days.

"ANTIS" ROUSED BY BRYAN.

Stand for Suffrage is Branded "a Tremendous Blunder."

Washington, July 21.—The "antis" are after the scalp of William Jennings Bryan as a result of his declaration in favor of suffrage.

Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, president of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, issued a statement tonight that Mr. Bryan has proved himself "a poor politician" and has failed to interpret correctly the sentiment in his home state.

The statement adds: "When Mr. Bryan goes to Nebraska to vote in favor of the woman suffrage amendment he will find that his attempt to make political capital out of this issue has been a tremendous blunder."

A revolt took place in suffrage circles here over the proposition to employ mere beauty instead of brains to obtain additional members for the congressional union. A meeting was held at the union headquarters last night, when teams were organized without reference to beauty and dominated by brains.

MANY WOES FOR POOR RICH CLASS

Chicago, July 20.—During the last Christmas holidays a professionel man was calling at the office of the president of one of the big corporations. During the call the door of the private office was opened without knocking and in stepped a boy of perhaps 18 years.

"Good morning, father," he said, glancing at the clock, which marked noon. The father smiled and nodded.

"I won't disturb you but a moment, sir. I find I had overlooked an engagement to lunch with the midday tango class, so I'll have to call off our little date."

The father expressed regret and presented his son to the visiting lawyer. The boy shook hands, chatted for a few moments with entire self-possession, and, on leaving, offered the lawyer a cigarette from his jeweled case.

"Jack has been home ten days now," said the fond father, "and it is an actual fact that I have only seen him twice and then by chance. He has had engagements for luncheon and dinner every day and has been out to a dance until 1 o'clock or later every morning. He's always out when I get home in the evening and sound asleep when I leave for the office in the morning. But"—and the man who rules a big corporation actually beamed at the consideration and kindness of his son—"he has given me his word that he will take luncheon with me once before he goes back to school."

That is by no means an extravagant illustration of a condition which is widespread so far as the children of well to do and rich people are concerned. Particularly during the shorter school vacations are these children caught in a whirl of constant excitement, which leaves them at the end in a state of both physical and mental exhaustion.

They visit all sorts of theaters apparently quite without regard to the kind of performance; they dance for six or eight hours out of each twenty-four; they eat elaborate dinners and luncheons daily; at the most sensitive period in their whole lives they are subjected to the most nerve-racking strain possible. They acquire tastes and habits which make them utterly dissatisfied with any but extravagant and more or less sensational amusements.

In the effort to live up to the standards set by the richer children, those whose parents are not so well off are driven to spend more money than they should. They acquire a real distaste for simple and normal forms of amusement.

It has been suggested that after the Juvenile Protective league gets through righting the wrongs of the poor little poor child, it set to work to remedy the almost equally pathetic injustice by which the poor little child is handicapped.

AND IT WASN'T A "DIRGE."

Firemen Thought It Was Alarm, But It Was Only "Ragtime."

Firemen at No. 1 engine house jumped from their beds at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, donned boots, raincoats and hats almost with one movement and started to slide down the brass poles leading from the sleeping quarters to the wagons and engines, expecting to go out on a run in response to the alarm that all heard.

Not until some of the men had climbed to their places on the wagons did they realize that the "alarm" they had heard while asleep was only "canned music" of the ragtime variety, coming from an automatic piano placed in the building by a salesman. Fireman Jones dropped a nickel into the machine shortly before retiring and it failed to start the apparatus until 1 o'clock. The boys don't remember now whether it was "Malinda's Wedding Day," or "Here Comes My Daddy Now," because, filled with disgust, they all clambered back to bed and as they slipped off into the Land of Nod the piano was just finishing the last measures of the early morning serenade.

RUNAWAY GIRL CROSSES PACIFIC TO ESCAPE ATTENTIONS OF STEPFATHER.

MARY FRAZER.

San Francisco, Cal., July 21.—Telling a story of wrongs at the hands of her stepfather in Honolulu and of her flight to this city in the steerage of the seamship Sierra to escape his persecutions, 17-year-old Mary Frazer, held at the local detention home, is prepared to make a desperate fight against being returned to the islands.

The girl was arrested on the strength of a cablegram from the juvenile court at Honolulu. This was after she had succeeded in taking refuge at the home of her aunt in Oakland, Cal.

"I was working a Honolulu millinery store as apprentice when my brother, Manuel, who is living in Oakland, sent me money to come to him," sobbed out the little run-away. "My brother John, who is only 21, came to Oakland three months ago and told Manuel how I was being abused. My other two brothers in Honolulu bought my ticket and saw me safely aboard the Sierra.

"Thirteen years ago my mother was divorced from my father and married my present stepfather, M. C. Martin, a carpenter, I hate may stepfather. He always wanted to kiss me, though he had nothing but harsh words for my mother. He used to tell me that he was just waiting until I became of age, when he would take possession of me."

Mary's own father, Jas. Frazer, lives in Honolulu. He has a large family, having married again, and, according to the girl, is unable to care for her with his other burdens.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. SEEKS BOY CHAMPIONS.

Governor Ralston Would Appoint Indiana Lads Delegates.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 21.—Indiana boys who are champion corn growers in their respective counties will be appointed delegates to the annual convention of the National Tomotch Farmers' club to be held next year at San Francisco, under the auspices of the Panama-Pacific exposition, if Governor Ralston can learn their names. Last April the governor, on the request of the farmers' organization, asked through the county superintendents of the state, for the names of the three juvenile corn kings in each county in order to make his selection of delegates. To these letters only nineteen county superintendents have responded.

It is desired that in counties where there is a boys' corn club the president of the club and the two boys under 21 years old holding the record for the largest acreage yield of corn should be named. In counties where no boys' corn club exists the county superintendent was requested to name three farmer boys under 21 years old to act as delegates.

General Stoessel

St. Petersburg, Russia, July 21.—Deprived of rank, pay and pension, the "defender of Port Arthur," Gen. Anatoly Stoessel, is dying in poverty and obscurity in the little village of Ilmelnik.

After his surrend of Port Arthur in the Russo-Japanese war to Gen. Nogi, in 1905, Stoessel was court martialled on the charge of cowardice and sentenced to death. The sentence was changed to imprisonment, and after two years he was released. He was without means and made a living selling tea. He is now living on the bounty of his former adjutant, Col. Ksidi.

Jack Johnson is Done; Public is Sick of Him, Declares Fullerton

Sport Expert Tells of Damage Big Negro Has Done to Boxing, and of Scandal Which Has Enveloped Every Match He Ever Made.

Jack Johnson is done.

The passing of the big negro who has dominated the boxing world for years is as complete as if he had been knocked out—even more so. The public never again will stand for him, and the promoter who would attempt to stage a battle between Johnson and anyone else would be foolish.

The accusations that are being hurled at him by Frank Moran and his manager have opened the eyes of the public all over the world to the tactics Johnson has pursued. Further it has hurt the boxing game, which the big cotton field negro has disgraced for years.

Johnson's career has been one long continued scandal and the latest merely accents his lack of character.

The fact that Moran and his manager confess that they signed an agreement to lay down to the negro and then tried to beat him puts them in a category slightly below ills.

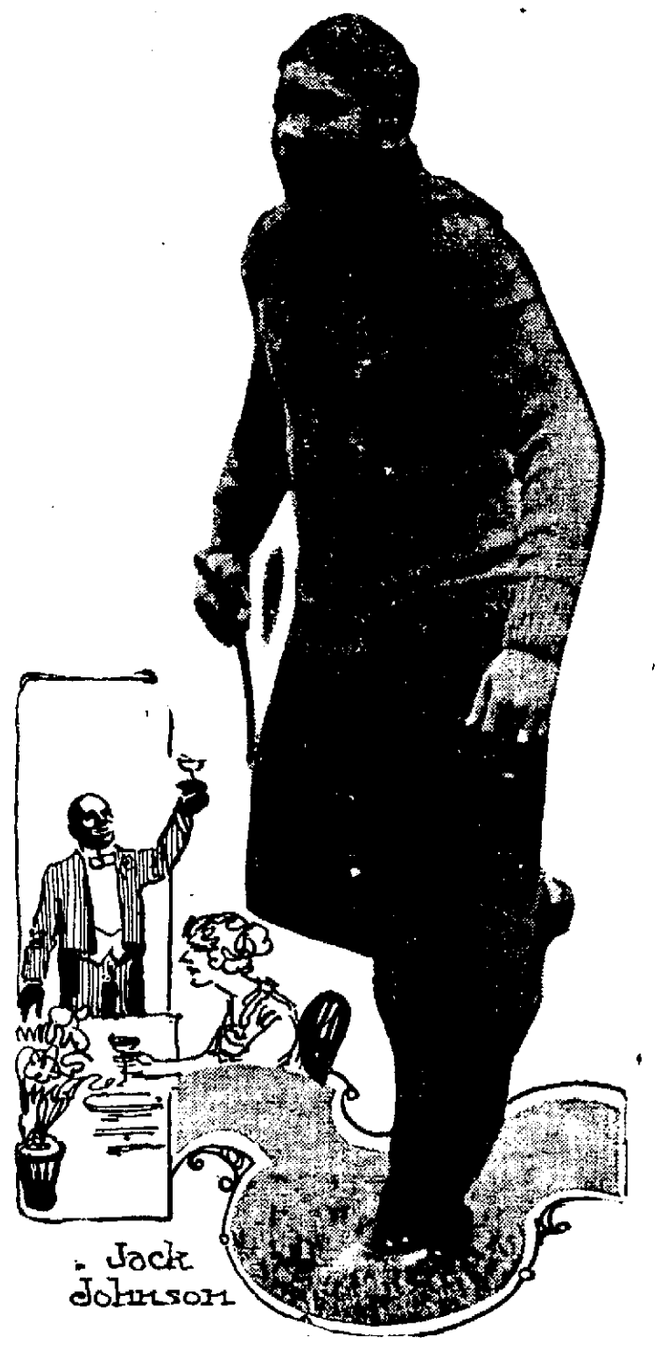

Study Johnson. He was a great fighter. He was starved and ill treated around Chicago during the boxing days, because the white fighters were afraid of him. In those days the big negro was quiet, courteous and seemingly honest.

He came with his hat off to ask favors, was ready to fight anyone for any part of the purse, and the managers and fighters refused him the chance. Sometimes he was hungry, and often desperate. He probably could have whipped any heavyweight in the world, and was falling before second raters who had food sufficient for proper nourishment. I felt sorry for him. Several times I begged managers to give him a chance merely out of fair play.

He went to Australia and returned a champion. A perfect, physical animal, he came back in full manhood—and well fed. He came to see me with his hat off, smiling, glad to be home and evidently grateful for past favors. Then a swarm of sharpers, crooks and leeches swarmed upon him; white men worse than he was, catering to his vanity, his pride and his passions—because he was getting big money. Naturally the cotton field negro "swelled." He commenced to show arrogance. He became detestable in his attitude toward whites, and from those who associated with him it was small wonder.

His fighting career has been marked with black. He "framed" at least two fights on the coast before he became champion, and he was mixed in other shady deals.

Johnson wanted the championship. He felt practically certain he would whip Jeffries. The story of that fight at Reno never has been told. It is practically certain that there existed an agreement that Johnson was lay down to Jeffries. It is certain that such an agreement was understood between certain parties connected with the fighters. Another thing: It is almost certain that the program would have been carried out but for Billy Delaney. Delaney had made Jeffries. He had quarreled with Jeffries over his marriage and the old partnership was broken off, and hatred followed. Delaney was out for revenge. He went behind the negro. Two days before the date of the fight it became a certainty that Johnson was not going to lay down. Delaney told me he would not let Johnson quit and that rather than allow him to quit he would handle the case himself.

You remember that at that time Jeffries suddenly became morose, went away into the mountains and sulked. He must have known that if they fought as scheduled Johnson tried he would be whipped. Johnson tried. Many think he double crossed the Jeffries crowd.

Twice since then Johnson has been mixed in miserable fakes in the ring. He faked with Jim Johnson in Paris. Now he tries to "fix" a fight with a second-rater like Moran, who tries to double cross him.

Isn't it wonderful what the boxing public will stand for? But this final blow is the limit. If they ever let Johnson fight again it will be in the hope that Sam Langford beats him, as he deserves. Nor is it any cinch they won't try to fix that. Truly, it is a lovely game.

WORLD INDUSTRIES ARE COMING HERE

Cheapness of Production Bring European Firms Across.

New York, July 21.—More than fifty of the leading lace and embroidery manufacturers of Germany, France and England have opened branch factories in this country in the last eight months. The latest plant to be built is one in Hoboken, N. J., costing $250,000.

Trade papers in the dry goods field are devoting much comment to the foreign invasion. It is said that this country will lead the world within the next year in the production of embroideries and laces and that the United States already stands next to Switzerland.

The influx of foreign manufacturers was brought about by the success which has been attained by Americans in the production of laces and embroideries by improved machinery. They not only lessen the cost of production, but actually are able to turn out finer products in many instances than the hand work of foreign lace makers.

Laces that cost $1 a yard to produce abroad can be duplicated by machinery for thirty cents a yard, enabling American manufacturers to undersell all others and gradually giving them a hold on the export trade.

It was once thought that the best laces in the world came from Switzerland, but sentiment in this respect has changed during the last few years. Germany and France are now among the heaviest consumers of American laces.

As the American manufacturers began to dominate the market there was only one course left to the foreign manufacturers and that was to establish branches in this country, where they could obtain the machinery and thus meet the American manufacturers on a common footing.

Some of the leading European lace manufacturers have closed their home plants, it is said, and are transferring all their business to this country. They are bringing their employes with them and teaching them how to operate modern American lace-making machinery. It is estimated that fully 3,000 persons have been brought to this country in the last two years to work in the lace mills, one-half of the number coming from Switzerland.

Once Said to Have Made an Open Confession of Murder.

Trenton, N. J., July 21.—John Edward Schuyler, who sat in the death chamber of Hunterdon county jail at Flemington one June day seven years ago and heard the ominous pounding of hammers that was shaping his gallows in the yard outside, stands a chance today of walking out of his prison cage vindicated.

Frank Burd, scarcely 23 years old, who began a life of crime with a jail sentence when he was only 7 years old, and who has passed the greater part of the sixteen years intervening behind prison bars, is said to have confessed to the murder of Manning Riley at Califon, N. J., the night of January 10, 1907, a crime for which Schuyler was convicted, sentenced to be hanged and later sent to prison here for life.

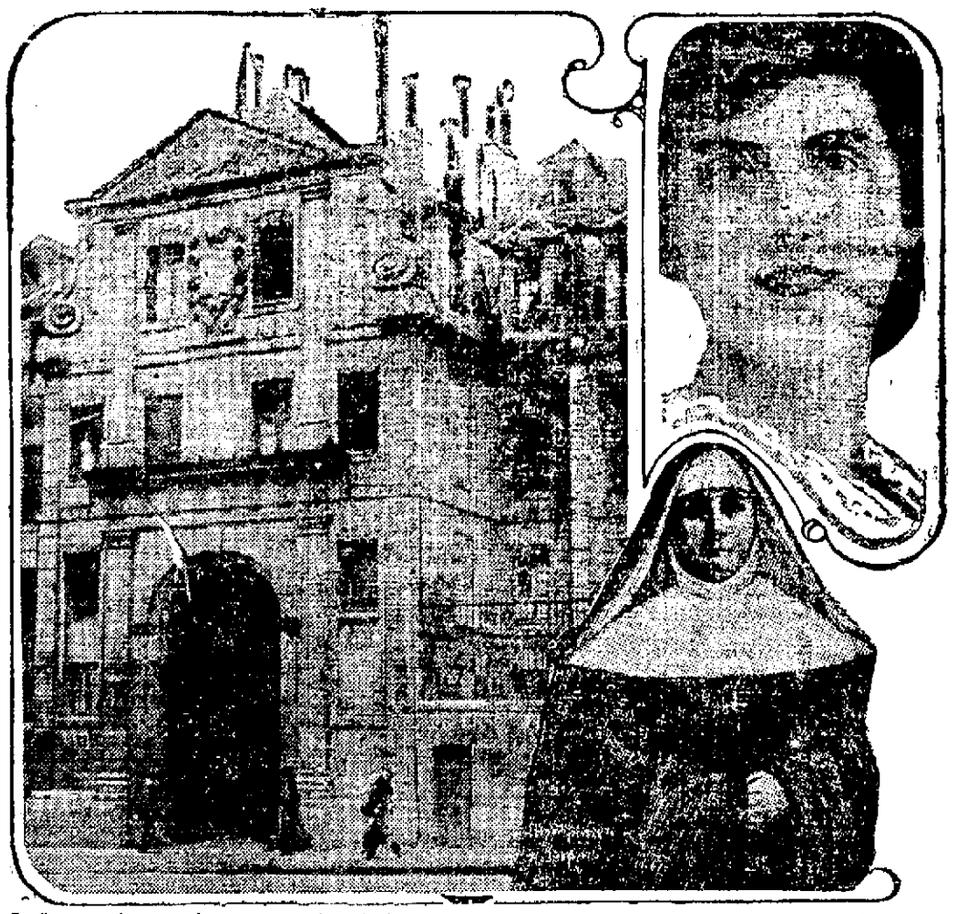

While Hunterdon county is reviewing the story of the slaying of Manning Riley, Miss Eleanor R. Gebhardt, lawyer, daughter of William C. Gebhardt, supreme court clerk, is taking steps to bring Schuyler's case before the board of pardons.

The people of Hunterdon county never were so excited over a crime as they were when Riley's body was found along upper Parker road. Riley, a young farmer, was extremely popular in the community.

Schuyler, who lived at Venny, a nearby town, was arrested the following day, accused of the crime. It was believed in Hunterdon at that time that George Knowles Large, district attorney, had a good chain of circumstantial evidence against Schuyler.

The prosecution tried to show that Schuyler held a grudge against Riley as a result of a whipping he received at Riley's hand. The jury convicted him after five hours' deliberation. After being sentenced to death Schuyler appealed to the board of pardons, and while the board was hearing his case Governor Stokes granted a reprieve to him.

Commissioner Osborne Wants Right to Question Anyone.

Washington, July 21.—Worried over the light returns from the income tax, Internal Revenue Commissioner Osborne has appealed to congress for legislation increasing his inquisitorial powers, giving him the right to quiz any one he suspects of false returns, and enlarging the penalties for tax-dodging and frauds.

The commissioner prepared and sent up to congress his own draft of an amendment to the income tax law, with this statement:

"Greater authority should be given the commissioner of internal revenue to enable him to compel taxpayers and others to make required returns and reports, and the proposed amendment would effect this."

The amendment proposed reads:

"All corporations, joint stock companies or associations and insurance companies shall, upon request of the commissioner of internal revenue, furnish information as to the names of persons owning shares of stock, common or preferred, or both, in such companies or organizations, the amount of dividend paid to each of such stockholders for any given period, and such other information as may be necessary or desirable in connection with the administration of the income tax law.

"Every company or association as above described, and every individual subject to the income tax, shall also permit free access to all books, papers, records and securities of every kind, whether for itself, himself or for another, by any revenue agent or inspector employed for the purpose of investigating income tax returns or in ascertaining whether such returns should have been made where no returns were filed, and it shall be lawful for the revenue agent to summon persons failing to make returns or who shall be considered to have made false and fraudulent returns, or any other persons having possession, care or custody of books of account containing entries relating to the business of such persons or any other person as he may deem proper, to appear before him and produce such books at a time and place named, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories under oath respecting the income of himself or another person."

Penalties under this proposed amendment are fines amounting to $10,000.

ATKINS SHUTS OUT TERRIERS

Fort Wayne Makes it Three Straight With Terre Haute.

Tommy Atkins, the star southpaw twirler for Fort Wayne, shut out the Terre Haute team Monday, making it the third straight victory for the fifth raters in the race for the Central league pennant. Inability to connect with the offerings of Atkins with men on bases tells the real cost of the game for Terre Haute. Cantwell, the opposing pitcher, twirled a fine game that entitled him to win, but his usual hard luck played against him.

The contest was marked by several sensational fielding features but the real big act was staged by Bratchi, who drove the ball over the center field fence in the fourth inning. It was a duplicate of the swat in Sunday's game with one down and no one on. The other Fort Wayne run was made in the second when with Brant discarded, Streeter drove a hit to left for three sacks. Martin hit a grounder which glanced off Anderson's ankle and was good for two bases, scoring Streeter from third.

Two men were on for Fort Wayne in the seventh with but one down. Quinlan booted Brant's drive and Street singled and Martin moved both runners one base on a bunt. Davis, Terre Haute's left fielder, made a sensational catch in this inning when he ran far back of the foul line and pulled down a long drive by Nespo, retiring the side.

In only one inning did it seem possible that the Terriers might score a run and that was in the ninth when Vann worked Atkins for a base on balls and Spair singled. However, the chance was lost when Davis forced Vann, Anderson fanned and Bratchi's catch of Quinlan's fly retired the side. The score:

NO STRIKE IN MAJOR LEAGUES

Settlement in Kraft Case Averts Possible Big Baseball War.

New York, July 21.—There will be no strike of baseball players in the two major leagues. The Kraft open basis for a strike order issued yesterday by the Baseball Players' Fraternity, was settled today by the Newark International agreeing to buy Nashville's interest in Kraft.

Announcement to this effect was made this afternoon by Charles H. Ebbetts, owner of the Brooklyn Nationals, and a large stockholder in the Newark International league team.

At the time of Mr. Ebbetts' announcement the American league baseball magnates were in session, having been called together by President Johnson to determine upon a course of action in case the players should obey the strike order. Mr. Ebbetts announced that Nashville had signified his acceptance of Newark's proposal and that Kraft would report to the Newark team at Providence tomorrow. Kraft has been under suspension for more than five weeks, ever since his refusal to report to the Nashville club. In settlement of all claims on Kraft the Nashville club is to receive $2,500, Mr. Ebbetts announced.

"I made this arrangement without either request or instruction from either the American or the National league," Mr. Ebbetts said. "I acted entirely upon my own responsibility. I have not been in communication with David Fultz. Doubtless, however, he as well as everybody else, will be pleased with this settlement of the situation."

Mr. Ebbetts was asked if the National league had "backed down."

"No," he replied. "If anybody has backed down, I have."

Club Owners Were Preparing to Deal With Satuation.

New York, July 21.—The threatened strike of the members of the baseball players' fraternity growing out of the demands of Player Clarence O. Kraft, who recently was suspended by the national committee for refusing to report to the Nashville club of the Southern association from the Newark International league club at a reduction in salary, was the principal subject for discussion today by club owners of the American league, called together here by President Ban Johnson.

The action of President Johnson in calling a meeting of his club owners was explained as a preventative measure. Mr. Johnson said that his league had no interest in the legal aspect of the Kraft case, as it involved the National league.

While American league owners were preparing to prevent the threatened strike if possible, officials of the National league and President Fultz, of the players' fraternity, were optimistic that a settlement of the question might be reached. It was possible that some major league club might claim the services of Kraft and thereby take over whatever claims the Nashville club of the Southern association or the Newark Internationals might have to him. President Fultz in a statement today said that the players were willing to arbitrate the question and had expected that such a course be followed, but the request was not answered by the national commission. This statement was taken to mean that Fultz would again request that arbitration be resorted to rather than follow up the ultimatum sent by him to the national commission yesterday, and plance organized baseball into a strike that would result in heavy losses in salaries and the probable closing of parks throughout the two big league circuits.

Speculation as to the number of players who would stand behind the fraternity in the event a strike is called, occupied the attention today of followers of the national game. It was not believed that members of the New York Giants would join in the movement and men close to the more prominent of the Brooklyn players thought it highly improbable that they would take chances of court action and loss of salary to uphold the fraternity. Manager Frank Chance, of the New York Americans, declared last night that eight out of ten of his players would continue to play.

Reports from other teams in the two big leagues were to the effect that a difference of opinion existed among the players who are members of the fraternity on the advisability of following a strike order. The Philadelphia Athletics appear to be opposed to a strike and if one is called to stand by their manager as opposed to the fraternity. The Philadelphia Nationals, on the other hand, seemed to favor standing by the fraternity, as did the Boston National team.

The Chicago Cubs, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Cleveland and Cincinnati clubs appeared to be about evenly divided over the question, while the Detroit Tigers appeared to favor a strike.

Enough players would go on strike, it was asserted here today, to cripple the majority of the teams of the two leagues, and this coupled with the declaration of President Johnson, of the American league, that he would order all parks in that organization closed if the strike order is issued tomorrow, presented a rather gloomy outlook for owners, players and fans.

NOTHING BUT SPEED GOES WHEN CHAS. TRASK IS ON THE COURTS

Whenever the official starter in the Northern Indiana tennis tournament, now on at the Country club courts, announces that Charles Trask, of Indianapolis, is due for a match, there is usually a grand rush toward his particular court and the spectators line up confident of seeing some exceptional work. Trask is showing more speed this season than ever before and in speaking of serves, it is nothing but a white streak and a puff of dust when the ball leaves his racquet. The Indianapolis racquet expert was also the feature of the northern Indiana tournament a year ago, but he is playing in much better form now than he did at that time, according to those who have kept their eyes on the young man.

NEVER AGAIN FOR ME, SAYS LOBERT

Can Cow Horse Beat Crack Base Runner? Well, It Did, Anyhow.

How Hans Lobert, of the Phillies, raced a cow horse around the bases out in California is told in the August Baseball Magazine. It seems that when the world tour baseball party played in Oxnard, Cal., a unique match between cow horse and ball player was staged. Here's what took place:

The feat is remarkable because it is the only one of its kind that has ever taken place. It was performed by John H. ("Honus") Lobert between the eighth and ninth innings of the game. The question arose as to whether a cattle horse, trained to rapid turns, could beat a base runner around the diamond, and immediately it was proposed to test the matter. The fastest cattle horse in Ventura county happened to be owned in Oxnard and against this wonderful animal, which had a record of 24 seconds to the quarter mile, Lobert (the fastest base runner living) agreed to race around the diamond. Interest in the event was intense, as a large portion of the residents of Oxnard are cattle men. An enormous crowd filled the stands (the game was a close contest, the score 2 to 1 at the beginning of the ninth inning) and, despite their great desire to witness the end of the baseball contest, the spectators were completely absorbed in the remarkable race between man and horse. Lobert, smiling and confident, advanced to the plate. The horse was ridden by a Mexican vaquero. After discussing their line of progress, Lobert and the rider moved to the scratch. Klem gave the word "go" and both horse and man were off in a flash. Lobert got into his stride quicker than the horset rounding first well in the lead. At second he was still a yard ahead and lengthened his lead on the turn to about twenty-five feet. When the spectators saw this great athlete actually leading the flying horse to third base, they rose en masse and their cheers could be heard for miles. It was a thrilling moment and one never to be forgotten. "Honus" reached third first, but only by a shade. Wheeling like a thunderbolt, the horse forced to his utmost, came abreast of Lobert and flashed past him about two yards from the plate, winner by half a length, in 14 seconds (Lobert's record time for the distance). Some watcher caught the time of the horse at 13 seconds—but Lobert said he was certain he did not run the distance faster than his record and as the horse only beat him by about half a length it is safe to say 14 seconds is the correct time for the race. The cowboys present were elated at the victory of the horse, but at the same time were generous in their shouts of applause to Lobert, whose wonderful effort will be remembered as one of the historical events of Ventura county. John said it was a ticklish sensation to hear a horse thundering at your heels; and at second base he turned his head to see if the horse was dangerously near. This threw him slightly out of his stride and probably, had it not done so, he would have won the race. However, he says he will never try it again as it is too risky a proposition for a man whose profession is baseball. There would be small profit in sustaining an injury which might easily occur in such an event.

RULING BLOW TO ORGANIZED BALL

Buffalo Judge Vacates Injunction Secured in Chase Case.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 21.—Organized ball suffered a legal defeat today when Justice Herbert P. Bissell granted the motion to vacate the injunction secured by the Chicago American league baseball club restraining Hal Chase from playing with the Buffalo Federal league club.

The lack of mutual obligation in the so-called ten days' clause of the contract under which Chase was playing with the Chicago team whereby the club could terminate the contract on ten days' notice while the player was bound under several provisions of the "national agreement" formed the basis of the decision vacating the injunction.

That organized baseball is a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law was denied by Justice Bissell on the ground that he cannot agree that "the business of baseball for profit is interstate trade of commerce and therefore subject to the provisions of the Sherman act."

The court held, however, that it was monopoly of the baseball business in contravention of the common law. Chase was served with injunction papers June 25 while he was playing with the Buffalo team at Federal park. He has been on the bench since. In his affidavit upon which the motion to vacate the injunction was based, Chase alleged that he gave the Chicago club ten days' notice of his intention to leave, at the expiration of which time he signed the Buffalo contract.

Regarding the ten day clause, Justice Bissell in holding that the injunction was unenforceable, said: "The plaintiff can terminate the contract at any time on ten days' notice. The defendant is bound to many obligations under the remarkable provisions of the national agreement. The players' contract executed in accordance with its terms, binds him not only for the playing season of six months from Apr. 14 to October 14, but also for another season. If the plaintiff chooses to exercise its option, and if it insists upon the requirement of an option clause in each succeeding contract, the defendant can be held for a term of years. His only alternative is to abandon his vocation. Can it fairly be claimed that there is mutuality in such a contract? The absolute lack of mutuality, both of obligation and of remedy, in this contract would prevent a court of equity from making it the basis of equitable relief by injunction or otherwise. The negative covenant under such circumstances is without a consideration to support it and is unenforceable by injunction."

Justice Bissell declared organized baseball as complete a monopoly of the baseball business for profit as any monopoly can be made. "It is in contravention of common law," he said, "in that it invades the right to contract as a property right, and in that it is a combination to restrain and control the exercise of a profession or calling."

Old Boxing Instructor Says Johnson is not Aggressive Fighter.

Chicago, July 21.—Bob Fitzsimmons and not Jack Johnson is the greatest of all boxers, is the belief of George Dawson, veteran boxing instructor of the Chicago Athletic association and onetime lightweight champion of Australia.

"I never have shared the hysteria over Johnson's greatness," remarked Dawson after one of his pupils had said the negro champion outclassed other men who held the title. "Do not make the mistake that I underrate him, however, for he has brought some money to me. I was one of the few who believed Jeffries did not have a chance with the negro and I won plenty of wagers on the outcome. I did not bet on the Moran-Johnson contest, for, although I was quite certain Johnson had gone back, I had no idea what sort of a boxer Moran was.

"The first time I ever saw Johnson in action was in California in 1902. I was training Fitzsimmons at the time for his second bout with Jeffries, and we were short a good sparring partner. Johnson was matched to box twenty rounds with Hank Griffin, a big negro trial horse, and I suggested to Bob that we engage the winner of this contest. Bob consented and I went to watch the two colored men box.

"Johnson at that time was almost, if not quite, as good as he ever was in his career. He had youth and vigor, and in those days there was more than one good white man who was giving him as wide a berth as champions did a few years later. The Johnson-Griffin contest ended in a draw, but Griffin looked to me as far the superior man and I engaged him to work with Bob.

"Now Bob was on the decline at that time. He was an old man when he got his first chance at the championship and three years before this time had been knocked out by Jeffries. But Griffith, although I considered him Johnson's superior and other judges considered him at least his equal, was the veriest playing in old Bob's hands. Fitz used to maul him around, outbox him and outslug him at his own pleasure. While Johnson may have improved considerably after this, I never could conceive of him improving to an extent to put him on a plane with Fitzsimmons.

"Of course Johnson was a wonderful defensive boxer and probably always will be. But I don't consider a man a great fighter just because he can keep from getting beaten. That's the reason I never thought Jim Jeffries a wonder. He never was an aggressive fighter, and most of his battles were won by letting the other fellow wear himself out fighting him. It is the same with Johnson. In none of the fights in which I have seen him has Johnson been aggressive. I doubt if he ever had an equal on the defence, but that is only half of the game. Fitzsimmons was especially good on the defence and offence.

"If Johnson was the greatest fighter in the world he never has shown any marked ability in disposing of his opponents. He was about at the zenith of his career when he won the championship from Tommy Burns, while Tommy Burns probably was one of the weakest men who ever held the title. Yet Johnson couldn't knock Burns out; he scored a technical knockout to his credit merely because the Australian police did not want to let Burns receive any more punishment.

"Two years later Johnson took on the shell of Jeffries, a man whom even a fair second rater of the present day probably could have beaten. But Jeffries stayed fifteen rounds with Jack before he was put away. (I have heard it argued that Johnson was merely playing with Jeff in the bout and could have finished it in half the time had he chosen to do so. But I fail to see any ground for such belief. Johnson is inordinately egotistical, and I think if he could have beaten Jim with one punch he would have done so. There was no possible financial reason for his letting Jeff stay, either, for Johnson had already disposed of his interest in the moving pictures and could not have cared much whether or not they were a success or a failure."

Quick Suggests a Baseball Reform

I now wish to take a moment or two for the reform of baseball.

Every season starts off well, and three times out of four is spoiled in midsummer by the fact that some team has run away with the pennant. Down in the cellar, too, will be found almost any season, some two or three teams which are making no fight except to keep out of last place.

The cause of this is perfectly obvious, and its cure is equally plain. Men like Mack and McGraw not only have the best men, but their power is so great that they reach out into the minors and snap up every good youngster who shows big league form.

There is a scriptural text which reads, "To him that hath shall be given, and to him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath," but so long as Providence attends to the application of this principle, there would seem to be no call for league rules and regulations to be framed for the increase of the advantage of him who hath over him who hath not.

The rules should be changed so that the weakest club in the superior league would have first choice among the stars of the inferiors. I leave the details to Mr. Fullerton; but I insist that something of the sort should be done.

No minor star should be purchasable by any big league team until all the club below .500 in the table of "standing of the clubs" have waived on him.

All drafts should be made by the league and the men drafted should go into a jackpot—to be opened the tail enders. After the tailenders have exercised first choice and thus perhaps picked up a Walter Johnson, a Frank Baker, a Tyrus Cobb or a Hans Wagner the team next above should be given second choice.

The power of one great player to even things up is illustrated by the effect of Johnson's acquisition by Washington. It was far better for the league and for baseball for him to go to a weak team. It would have been a bad thing if Mack had acquired him.

Give the weak teams the strong recruits as a matter of right, and we shall soon see those hard gruelling finishes in all the leagues which as a fan I for one delight in—and all fans are alike in this.

Then we shall not have the July slump in half the towns. The interest will grow until the last game is played, for every league will give us a horse race finish.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, July 21—Predictions that black rust would become more pernicious tended to bring about an advance today in the price of wheat. Crop advices from Europe were also of a bullish tenor, especially as to Russia, Roumania and Bulgaria. After opening the same as last night to ⅛@½c higher, the market made a general upturn.

The close was steady, ⅝c to ¾@⅞c net higher.

Need of rain led to a rise in corn. What selling there was came from speculators who relied on the chance of a decline, resulting from promised showers. Prices opened ⅛c to ⅛@⅜c higher, and seemed inclined to continue within that range.

The close was steady, ¼c to ⅜c above last night.

Oats hardened with corn. Business, however, was light.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, July 21.—Trading in stocks today was again largely influenced by foreign conditions. London's quotations for Americans were appreciably lower and dealings here soon recorded a two-point loss in Baltimore & Ohio and one point in New Haven. Both issues of Baltimore & Ohio soon descended to new low records, as did also Erie common and first preferred. St. Paul, New York Central and Canadian Pacific were slightly lower, with gains in the Harrimans, Lehigh Valley and Steel. Sale of 100 shares of Big Four preferred at 40 ,a ten-point decline, was among the unusual features. The list inclined to sag before the end of the first half hour.

The highly professional and technical character of the market was demonstrated before the end of the morning session when unconfirmed rumors that the freight rates decision would be handed down later in the day and that it would prove distinctly favorable, were effective in causing a hasty covering of shorts. Steel was up a point on circumstantial reports that the quarterly statement of earnings to be issued next week would exceed recent estimates. Bonds were irregular.

The oversold condition of the market brought a sudden reversal today. Favorable crop news and the probable imminence of the eastern freight rate decision precipitated a hurried retreat of the bear faction. The closing was strong.

Short covering was on a broader scale, the whole list advancing in spirited fashion. Numerous gains of one to two points above yesterday were established.

DAILY MARKET LETTER.

(J. S. Phillips, Member of Chicago Board of Trade, North American Building.)

Chicago, July 21.—Wheat shorts bought heavily today. Russian news was again bullish. Country sold cash wheat heavily on the bulge. Tone of market firm, with only limited breaks indicated. Northwest Miller special bulletins admitting extensive rust damage in northwest a feature. Cash corn and oats advanced ¼c to ½c. Good demand conditions favor consignments. Wheat premiums steady at 1c over for 2 red and 1¼c to 1⅜c over for 2 hard. Wheat promises further bulge. Definite news is required from the northwest and Russia will evidently contribute more compliants. Our winter wheat is the only spot in the world with a profuse crop. Present condition of corn is probably around 80 per cent. and the crop is drifting along with skimpy rains to a point where excessive August downpours will be urgent. We believe the situation warrants attention to purchasing side.

Closing prices of stocks as follows: Atchison, 98; Smelter, 66¼; Copper, 69¾; B. & O., 81⅝; C. & O., 47½; Canadian Pacific, 186; Erie, 25⅝; Missouri Pacific, 10⅝; Northern Pacific, 109¾; New York Central, 85¾; Pennsylvania, 111; Reading, 162½; Southern Railway, 21⅞; St. Paul, 98¼; Southern Pacific, 96½; New Haven, 53; Union Pacific, 128; U. S. Steel, 61⅞.

PA'S IMPORTED SON-IN-LAW

Huerta, Fallen Dictator, is Aboard Dresden Bound for Jamaica.

Puerto, Mexico, July 21.—Without even a shout of "Good-bye" to mark his departure from Mexican soil, General Huerta, fallen dictator, steamed away last night at 7:30 o'clock aboard the German warship Dresden for Jamaica. With him were members of his family and General Blanquet, former minister of war, with his wife and daughter.

General Huerta referred to President Wilson in a conversation with newspaper men just before leaving shore, but true to precedent, was non-committal in all his remarks. He professed deep regard for the American people, characterizing the statement that he was the enemy of the United States as a "lie."

Going aboard the Dresden Huerta carried nothing except his black paper cigarette.

Blanquet was at his side, both hands laden with suit cases. Aides followed similarly burdened.

Huerta's face lightened somewhat when the correspondents approached and he began to talk to them.

"But there is absolutely nothing I want to say to you," he said.

"What about Bryan? What do you think of him?" asked one man.

"I want to say nothing whatever about him," replied the ex-president.

Another asked him about President Wilson.

"Mr. Wilson is president of the United States," he answered, "and as such I respect him. I must be careful what I say about him, too, for let me remind you that in all this affair I have never officially mentioned his name. The nearest I came to it was in my note of resignation, and then only by inference.

"Oh, yes, yes, he has spoken of me many times indeed. He has been kind enough to send me messages, but I never have felt like using his name.

"However, as a matter of fact, do you know, Wilson, Carranza and Villa are my best friends. They have introduced me rather widely. I am merely one of the sons of Mexico, no more important myself than any one of these."

He waved his hands to include a little group of officers and laboring men, who had gathered to hear him.

"But they have advertised me," he continued. "Oh, yes, they have done that," and the grizzled fugitive blew contemptuously a cloud of cigarette smoke and shrugged his shoulders. "Oh, now, do not misunderstand me. I have heard it said that I am an enemy of the United States. That is a lie. I admire the American people, and I have all respect for Mr. Wilson as president of that people.

"The United States is certainly the most powerful nation on this side of the Atlantic and perhaps the most powerful in the world, and her people are entitled to the admiration of all. No one knows better than I that there may be wide difference between the people and the government."

As to the immediate future of his country General Huerta was evasive, but he did say that peace was not quite at hand.

"When real peace will come," he commented, "is difficult to say. There must be a crisis in all diseases, physical as well as sociological. Naturally there is a crisis due here. It may come in one month, two months, three months, but it will come."

"But will that mean intervention?" was asked.

The officers, the laboring men and all others looked at him more closely, but with no loss of time Huerta shot back emphatically, "No, never."

General Huerta, whose wife had been signaling him to "come on," moved away toward the landing at the pier. He called back that he expected to write out a detailed statement and send it ashore. But he never did.

IN THE CHURCHES

TOOK RIDE ON "ELECTRA."

Children of the Grace Lutheran Church Saw Fort Wayne by Night.

Monday evening the small children of the Sunday school of the Grace Lutheran church were given a two hour ride on the new Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company's car, called the Electra, which has been built for the purpose of accommodating people who wish to see Fort Wayne by night. The car was in charge of Rev. Paul Meyer, pastor of the church.

The ladies of the church have engaged the car and a trailer for the evening of July 23 and on the evening of August 4. The Associated Christian Workers will make a trip about the city, to Robison park and back, to Foster park in the Electra and four trailers. Each car will be lighted.

WORK PROGRESSING RAPIDLY.

Cathedral is Beginning to Take On Aspect of New Building.

Work of re-surfacing the Cathedral of Immaculate Conception is progressing rapidly and it is thought that by the last of the week the entire surface of the building facing Calhoun street, will be finished, which will make it look as though it was a new structure.

The same company that is doing this work re-surfaced the old First building and also the St. John Reformed church. Six men are working all the time on the scaffold and four men are on the ground supplying the workmen on the scaffold with mortar. Two others have started to build scaffolds on the north side of the building, which will be finished next.

To Make Final Arrangements.

The officials of the Rosary society of the Cathedral will hold a business meeting Tuesday at Library hall to make final arrangements for the social to be given on Thursday evening. Indications are that this affair will be largely attended and extensive arrangements are being made.

Has Hired Four Cars.

J. A. Nipper, superintendent of the Rescue Mission, on Columbia street, has contracted with the traction company for four cars for next Saturday to Robison park. The cars will leave the transfer corner at 9 o'clock and dinner will be served to four car loads of the people of the city. Public spirited people have donated for the occasion.

Church Notes.

The Spiritual Reform church will hold its regular Wednesday evening services at 7:30 o'clock at 1952 Calhoun street.

Was a Great Success.

The annual picnic of the St. John Evangelical church, in Lake township, was held Sunday in Andrew Lamle's grove and was the best attended picnic ever given by the church. Officials in charge state that the amount cleared was the greatest in the history of the church.

Section No. 3 of the Ladies' Aid society of the West Creighton Avenue Church of Christ, will meet at the home of Mrs. Kiser, 2707 Lafayette street, Thursday for a pot-luck dinner.

Chicago Mother Run Down by Motor Car, But Babe Escapes.

Chicago, July 21.—Mrs. Mary Sullivan of 432 Aberdeen street, carrying her baby in her arms, started across Jackson boulevard yesterday afternoon in the surge of a State street crowd answering the commands of the traffic officer's whistle.

R. Boegelsack, og 10522 Avenue M, South Chicago, driving his motor car, approached the crossing applied the brakes. The car stopped hesitatingly and then lunged toward the crowd.

Mrs. Sullivan screamed and, swinging around facing the curb she had just left, tossed her baby at the crowd.

A dozen pair of hands reached into the air.

The car struck the mother and knocked her to the pavement just as the infant fell into the arms of E. B. Duffy of 303 West Twenty-second place.

Abraham Levy of 643 West Thirteenth street was also caught by the automobile and tossed into the boulevard.

Mrs. Sullivan and Levy were carried off the street. Duffy gave the baby into the care of a policeman, who sat with it in his arms while the ambulance waited for the victims.

At the Iroquois Memorial hospital it was said Mrs. Sullivan had suffered a concussion of the brain and bruises, rendering her condition serious. Levy was bruised about the head and legs.

Boegelsack was taken to the Central station on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. He said his brakes had failed to work properly.
